First prize went to Dave Wilkie, Box 1665, R.R. No. 3, when he captured Their Royal Highnesses for Victoria Times Royal Visit Photo Contest. The amateurs were hampered by murky weather, but many fine pictures were entered. Wilkie got his delightfully informal snap just as the Princess and the Duke of Edinburgh set out from the Legislative Buildings. (Other winners on Page 11.)

Egypt To Charge British
'Aggressions' Before U.N.

CAIRO, Nov. 3 (Reuters).—Foreign Minister Salaf El Din Pasha flew to Paris today with documents on British "aggression" in the Suez Canal zone since Egypt cancelled the Anglo-Egyptian treaty.

He will lead Egypt's delegation to the United Nations General Assembly, which opens Tuesday.

Salaf El Din said Friday Egypt had not "so far" decided to bring the Anglo-Egyptian dispute before the General Assembly.

But a foreign-ministry spokesman said the minister will meet Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, in Paris to explain Egypt's attitude.

In the Suez Canal zone, British troops were on guard against possible rioting after a quiet Muslim Sabbath Friday.

In Cairo, an Egyptian interior-ministry statement listed a new series of minor incidents which it alleged had occurred in the last 24 hours.

Dispatch Hints Canucks
In Furious Korea Action

Canadian troops may be in a major action in Korea. The following dispatch was filed today by veteran Canadian Press correspondent Bill Boss, who is with the Canadian Forces in the West Central Sector. Censorship normally prevents a correspondent naming units by name.

By BILL BOSS

With Canadian Forces in Korea

WEST-CENTRAL SECTOR, Korea, Nov. 3 (CP).—Waves of Communist infantry today charged United Nations ridge-top positions in this sector.

They surrounded a U.N. outpost position but the men fought their way back to the main defense lines.

The attack was spotted about 9.15 last night when sentries heard explosions and groaning in minefields protecting the U.N. lines.

The Reds went through their bag of tricks, including bugle calls and colored-flare signals to direct their forces.

They used three methods to cut a path through the minefield. With machetes they chopped barbed wire from its steel-peg moorings. With Bangalore torpedoes—long pipes with an explosive at the end for detonation in the field—they blew up buried mines. They used the bodies of their own dying as paving stones.

The Red attack was supported by at least eight medium machine-guns, anti-aircraft artillery firing at point-blank range, two self-propelled guns and batteries of heavy and medium mortars.

It was of battalion strength and the enemy came in four times during the night.

The U.N. outpost platoon, while surrounded, asked artillery fire on its own position but this was refused. At 4 a.m. it fought its way out.

When it was about 100 yards back the platoon leader paused to direct a concentration of 10 rounds per gun from the entire divisional artillery, on to the ground just vacated.

Besides allowing further withdrawal, it inflicted heavy casualties on the Communists. The colonel commanding U.N. troops said the casualty ratio in the U.N. troops' favor was probably 20 to 1.

CAPTURE PRISONERS

The U.N. troops also captured three prisoners, two of them wounded.

At one time the platoon leader's flare pistol was shot out of his hand and his revolver jammed when he fired it at point-blank range. Picking up a burp gun from a dying Chinese he continued the battle, using the enemy weapon until the end of the engagement.

Another soldier, completing his first day with the company involved, calmly stripped two jammed Bren guns in the heat of the action and put them back in service.

U.S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Nov. 3 (AP).—Eight separate Communist attacks on the Korean western and central fronts today failed to gain ground, but Communist guns shot down two United Nations planes.

A United States F-84 Thunderjet was lost in one of three jet battles that whizzed across northwestern Korean skies Saturday. An F-81 Mustang was downed by ground fire.

The Fifth Air Force said three Russian-made Mig were damaged when 20 Mig jumped 24 Thunderjets pulling out of a rail strike near Sinanju. The Mig downed the F-84.

A U.N. advance position on the western front just west of Yonchon repulsed three company-sized enemy attacks during the night. Then the U.N. forces were forced to pull back when the Reds attacked in battalion strength in three waves. U.N. forces, however, reoccupied the positions unopposed at dawn, the Eighth Army said.

The Communists hammered at U.N. positions southeast of Kumsong in three attacks but were unable to dent the U.N. defenses.

A fourth attack by a platoon southwest of Kumsong also was thrown back.

Northwest's
Lumbermen
Parley HereHundreds To Talk
Industry Problems

By plane and ship, the vanguard of 1,500 Canadian and U.S. western logging operators flocked into Victoria today to attend the 42nd three-day session of the Pacific Logging Congress opening Monday.

From 84-year-old P. B. Anderson, of Vancouver, "dean of loggers" in this area, down to youngsters of the "game," the rugged contingent of early arrivals served notice they will mix business with pleasure in hearty fashion.

They came from the fir forests up-Island and the B.C. mainland, from the great fir and pine stands of the U.S. northwest, and from the tall timber of Idaho, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, and California.

By the time the first committee session gets under way at 9 Monday morning at the Empress Hotel, 1,500 operators and others in allied industries are expected to be registered.

WIVES ON HAND

In addition, 500 or more wives of the operators will be on hand to take part in social events.

Showers this morning failed to dampen enthusiasm of the early arrivals, some of whom strolled to the open lot at Government and Belleville streets to watch the assembly of a huge logging machinery exhibit to be put on in conjunction with the congress.

TO DISCUSS COSTS

Feature of the business sessions will be a discussion on "Determination of Logging Costs From the Managerial Viewpoint."

The sessions will center about the Sirocco Club. Other sessions at the Sirocco will center about yarding and loading, falling and bucking, truck roads and hauling, safety, and industry's relation to U.S. government during national emergency. These will be conducted Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sidney G. Smith, Vancouver, president of the congress, will preside at the opening session at 1.30 Monday, when Lands and Forests Minister E. T. Kenney will give an address of welcome.

Annual meeting and election of officers will take place Monday evening at 6.30.

Selects Three
More Ministers

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill today named three new ministers to handle the legal functions of his Conservative government.

Lionel Frederick Heald, 54-year-old lawyer, becomes attorney-general at £10,000 a year. A Conservative member of the House of Commons since 1950, Heald is an expert on real estate and tax law.

Maj. Reginald Manningham-Buller, 46, was named solicitor-general. He is chairman of the Conservative party's legal committee and a member of Parliament. The solicitor-general's post pays £7,000 a year.

Churchill chose William Rankine Milligan, 52, to be solicitor-general for Scotland. Milligan, an Edinburgh lawyer, is not a member of parliament.

The starter, stewards and judges are usually Britons.

Great 'Unnatural' Meteor Lights Five States

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Nov. 3 (UP).—A huge meteor flashed across the western sky Friday night and lit up before it hit, leaving a trail of sparks in the air.

Pilots over southern California said the meteor appeared as an "odd bluish white light."

"I thought it was another A-bomb," Capt. Markle Sparks said in Los Angeles.

Other pilots described seeing a tail that was in the sky for "a good 30 seconds after the initial flash."

Carol Tyler, manager of the Atomic Energy Commission's tests near Las Vegas, denied the flash was connected with operations at the Frenchman's Flats proving grounds.

Cecil Richardson of Flagstaff, one of the first to call the sheriff's office, said "it lighted up the city with an unearthly glow—no noise at all—just a slow reddish blue flash—rather startling."

Observatory personnel at Mt. Wilson, Calif., Tucson, Ariz., and here failed to witness the spectacle but said the descriptions

Them Yankee rebels in Washington he seen what they're missin'.

Egypt had plagues o' locusts an' sech in olden times. Now they got Nationalists.

See they've found some more lots available at Ross Bay. Don't think I'll join in th' rush.

Ontario Snowstorm
Takes Lives Of 14EXPLORATION PERMITS
FOLLOW B.C. OIL FIND

Application for permits to carry out exploration work in the Fort St. John area continue to pour in to the petroleum and natural gas control office.

Dr. T. B. Williams, controller, said today there have been 18 applications since the north country discovery.

"And we expect more today and next week," said the hard-nosed controller.

To date, the applications cover about 1,000,000 acres.

U.N. INTRODUCE
NEW TRUCE PLANReds Cool To Proposal That Would Place Kaesong In Demilitarized Zone

MUNSAN, Korea, Nov. 3 (AP).—United Nations' truce negotiators, in a surprise move, proposed to the Communists today that disputed Kaesong be placed in a demilitarized zone. Decision on the Red-held city was the final main issue blocking agreement on a Korean armistice cease-fire line.

Red negotiators at Panmunjom apparently were cool toward the offer, but a U.N. spokesman said the Communists "had not categorically turned down the proposal."

He said the Communists repeated the reasons why they feel Kaesong should remain in their control.

U.N. Allies want Kaesong, about two miles south of the 38th Parallel, to protect the northern approaches of Seoul.

LACK DETAILS

There were no details available on the U.N. plan but it could mean one of three things:

1. Set up a separate demilitarized (neutral) zone around Kaesong under joint control.

2. Enlarge the already proposed U.N. buffer zone to include Kaesong.

3. Pull the proposed U.N. buffer zone back so that it runs through Kaesong.

Brig-Gen. William P. Nuckolls said the suggestion was merely "an oral statement of principle" by Brig-Gen. Henry I. Hodess, head of the U.N. sub-committee.

The U.N. offer came in the 10th meeting of the sub-committees. They will meet again Friday at 11 a.m.

The sub-committees are in tentative agreement of a U.N. proposed 2½-mile-wide buffer zone on the eastern and central battle fronts. It is almost entirely in North Korea and follows the present battle line.

Even if the issue of a cease-fire line is settled, armistice negotiators must agree on three other tough questions before the shooting in the 17-month-old Korean war will stop.

These are how the truce will be supervised, how to exchange prisoners, and what recommendations will be made by the armistice negotiators to their governments.

High-Rigger Hurt

VANCOUVER, Nov. 3 (CP).—A Vancouver Island high-rigger is in "fair" condition in General Hospital here with a possible fractured skull suffered when his head was crushed between a boom and a spar tree.

He is Rene Beaudry, of Port Alberni, employed at Bledet, Stewart & Welch Camp Eight. His hard safety hat is credited with saving his life.

He was reported to police three youths asked him for a Halloween "hand-out" and when he told them they were "rushing things" had the acid splashed in his face.

Police have not divulged if, in the confession, Smith gave any reason why he perpetrated the hoax.

In the confession Smith said he dabbed the caustic soda and lye on his face with a piece of cloth.

Two Triple-Death Car
Crashes On Icy Roads

TORONTO, Nov. 3 (CP).—Fourteen persons died in traffic accidents and from heart attacks attributed to the weather as the first general snowfall of the season Friday night turned Ontario highways into skating rinks and cut visibility.

There were two triple-death automobile accidents.

John M. McDonald, 37, of Avondale, N.S.; Loretta Enright, 24, of Toronto, and Hugh McDonald, 33, of Westhill, Ont., were fatally injured in a two-car collision near Orillia.

Three residents of Royal Oak, Mich., were killed in a collision between two cars near Kingsville, Ont.

Glen Sedore, eight, of Odessa, was killed when he was crushed against a bridge railing by a skidding transport truck.

Three Toronto men died of heart attacks during the storm.

A service station employee at Napanee died while trying to pull a wrecked car from a ditch.

Near Sarnia, Kenneth Allan died after his motorcycle was hit by a truck.

John Hornbrook, 65-year-old retired farmer, was killed by a transport truck near Burks Fall.

Donald F. Brown, 19, was killed in an accident near Bowmanville.

Heaviest snowfall was in the eastern part of the province. Killaloe reported seven inches and Toronto five.

Canadians Don Overcoats
As King Winter Moves In

By BRITISH UNITED PRESS

Canadians from the Alberta foothills to the Atlantic seaboard hung their heavy overcoats on the hall rack today as the first general snows of the year moved in.

A storm brewed in the Rockies barreled down over the prairies, hitting a 20-mile an hour clip as it drove light to heavy snowfalls before it.

The Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario shook themselves loose from a second storm that drove up the east coast and swung inland.

A gale whipped down the Pacific seaboard from Alaska, driving small craft to shelter along the B.C. coast.

Saskatoon and Dafoe, Sask., and the Pas, Man., shared honors for the coldest spot in the west as the temperature dipped to eight above. Mooseonee, Ont., recorded five below, however, to be the ice-box of the nation.

FIRST SNOW

The eastern seaboard provinces had their first snowfall of the season. The weatherman predicted a winter wonderland for Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, spending a two-day rest at their log cabin hideaway in the Laurentian Mountains.

The western storm headed towards Winnipeg, Man., was expected to veer off into the northern plains states late today.

The brunt of the storm passed Edmonton, Alta., as a warm flow of Pacific air slanted down from the Rockies behind the storm.

A grave new maritime tie-up that would have hit every port between Maine and Texas was averted Friday night after the officers put off their midnight strike deadline until the stevedore dispute is settled.

Charles F. May, president of the Masters, Mates' and Pilots' Union (A.F.L.), said negotiations will continue in the officers' contract dispute with shipping operators.

The 12,000 officers seek increased pension and welfare benefits.

In the billion-dollar dock tie-up, some 20,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association (A.F.L.) are rebelling against their president, Joseph P. Ryan. They demand that he reopen contract negotiations with employers.

COLORFUL SLEIGH RIDE
ENJOYED BY ROYAL PAIR

STE. AGATHE DES MONTS, Que., Nov. 3 (CP).—Behind a beautiful palomino named Candy, Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh went for their first Canadian sleigh ride today.

Falling snow and the snow-covered pines and spruces of the Laurentian Mountains provided a perfect setting for the trip, and the big red French-Canadian sleigh gave a holiday touch of color.

Warmly wrapped for the ride, the Princess and Philip drove about the 500-acre estate where they are week-end guests for a restful break in the Royal tour.

They were smiling and gay and appeared to enjoy the first real touch of winter in the Laurentians. More than a foot of snow had fallen by mid-afternoon.

COMIC STRIP OF THE FUTURE

Chris Welkin Starts
Space Travels Monday

"Chris Welkin, planeteer," the amazing new comic strip about space travel, will appear for the first time in The Victoria Times on Monday.

It will run daily with the rest of The Times comics, introducing as well such characters as Rocky Starr, Professor Budd, Amaza and the Mysterious Mr. 7 from another planet. Says Russ Winterbottom, writer of the science adventure strip: "It's only a step into the planetary future from today's rockets, guided missiles and proposed man-made moons. Chris Welkin takes to this wondrous world of tomorrow."

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

CHOOSING A SPEAKER

ANNOUNCEMENT of the election of the new Speaker of the British House of Commons, to succeed Col. D. Clifton Brown, aroused more than a passing interest in me. Having met the retiring Speaker, as well as the two who contested the office, I had a personal interest in the matter. Furthermore, the occasion was significant as marking the first time in nearly 50 years that the nominee was opposed.

Rt. Hon. W. S. Morrison, Conservative member for the Gloucestershire constituency of Cirencester and Tewkesbury, won over Rt. Hon. James Milner, Labor member for Leeds and former Deputy Speaker, by 318 votes to 251.

DECISION, PROTESTED

I CAN'T SAY I was particularly surprised at the defeat of Major Milner's candidacy for this great office, in the light of the recent events and the change of government. I happened to be in the House of Commons in June when he fell foul of Mr. Churchill's party by reason of a decision given while presiding as chairman of the ways and means committee.

At that time Major Milner ruled out certain amendments to the Finance Bill relating to the petrol tax, which had been proposed by Conservatives—then Opposition—members. His ruling was challenged and aroused one of the stormiest debates of a stormy session. Mr. Churchill led the spirited protests against what was considered by the Opposition unfair treatment and negation of a constitutional principle.

SEQUEL TO STORM

ALTHOUGH, on a division, the chairman was sustained, feeling ran so high that the matter was revived in the House a few days later, couched in such terms as to imply that Major Milner should resign. But he weathered the storm. However, his defeat in the contest for the Speakership can be considered the sequel.

Mr. Morrison, the new Speaker—who is no relation to Mr. Herbert Morrison, b. the war—is 58 years of age, a barrister and veteran of World War One. He has had long experience in the House, being first elected in 1929, and has held various ministerial offices, including Minister of Agriculture. So he should be thoroughly familiar with parliamentary rules and procedure.

EARLY PRECEDENT

ALTHOUGH it is nearly 50 years since the Speakership was last contested in the Mother of Parliaments, it was by no means unusual in the early days of this ancient and traditional office. In the 17th Century, according to Michael MacDonagh's book on The Speaker, that office was controlled by the Sovereign rather than by Commons, and in March, 1679, an extraordinary situation developed.

Edward Seymour was chosen Speaker by the Members, but for the first—and last—time in the history of the British Parliament, was denied the necessary Royal approval. Seymour, who had been Speaker in the previous House, was in disfavour with King Charles the Second, owing to an alleged intrigue with the wife of the Lord Treasurer.

ROYAL VETO

SO WHEN he approached the King with the customary speech beseeching the Royal approval, the King, through the Lord Chancellor, refused to accept him and commanded the House to nominate another Speaker.

Here was a nice how-do-you-do! The House was in an uproar. Someone proposed Sir Thomas Meres, but the House would have none of him. Meanwhile the King stubbornly refused to accept Seymour. Finally a compromise was effected with William Gregory, who was chosen and formally approved.

POTENT PAMPHLET

AFTER the death of King Charles, Seymour again had ambitions for the Speakership, but was defeated by Sir Thomas Littleton in 1689. A pamphlet circulated before the opening of the House under the title, "Considerations Upon the Choice of a Speaker," recommended Robert Harley for the Chair, and was very disrespectful to the other candidates. It described Littleton as "a known profligate in the service of the Court" and Seymour as "a known profligate in the service of the public," hardly parliamentary language, as judged by today's standards.

Despite the pamphlet's advocacy of Harley—or perhaps because of it—Littleton won out. But Harley finally succeeded to the Speakership in 1701, and subsequently became first Earl of Oxford. This little bit of history may not be altogether analogous to the recent differences over the Speakership, but it adds a little piquancy to the situation.

S. F. Boomer, Noted Shipping Figure Passes

Funeral services were held today for Simon Francis (Frank) Boomer, well-known to shipping men on this coast. Mr. Boomer died Thursday in St. Joseph's Hospital. He was 55.

Born in Grays, Essex, he served during the First World War as an engineer with the Royal Canadian Navy and afterward served in that capacity with the Canadian Robert Dollar Line. In 1929, he went to work for Lloyds Registry as a marine surveyor.

At the outbreak of the Second World War he was appointed Admiralty overseer of construction for the Port of Victoria. After the war, he was transferred by Lloyds to the firm's Los Angeles office, where he stayed until his retirement in 1948.

His home here was at 710 Lamson Street, Esquimalt. He is survived by his wife, at home; two brothers and two sisters.

LONDON (CP)—A juvenile motorcycle novice paid $5 in court here for failing to carry learner plates indicating he was a beginner. He told the magistrate the plates had been left off "to impress a girl friend."

Army Promotion And Appointments

Pistol marksman and R.C.A.F. veteran, Lieut. Frank J. Kennedy has been posted to 160th Battery of 75th (B.C.) H.A.A. Regiment, Bay Street Armouries. He was commissioned and served with R.A.F. pathfinder group and was injured and invalided out after a crash landing.

Promoted Major G. L. Dunlop, recently completed an artillery staff course at Esquimalt. He was the only reserve officer to do the course. Major Dunlop is battery commander in the 155th H.A.A. having taken over command from Major P. Bogelund, recently retired.

Appointed quartermaster of the 75th (B.C.) H.A.A. Regiment, Capt. F. Keith Brown in civil life is an estates officer with the Canada Trust Company. He enlisted in 1941 with the 19th Field Regiment, saw the Normandy assault, the fighting in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

TROUT FISHING research for the University of British Columbia is the job of David R. Hurn who is a graduate of U.B.C. in zoology and botany. He is son of H. S. Hurn, 710 Linden.

Nanaimo City Will Widen Boundaries

NANAIMO.—Ratepayers on Friday passed two by-laws approving extension of Nanaimo city boundaries to include Brechin and Acadia districts.

The move will more than double the city's area, and increase the population by 6,000. Sale of Central Sports Grounds for $100,000 also was approved. A store tendered the figure with plans to erect a modern parking shopping centre.

Other by-laws passed, all by good majorities, gave Vancouver Island Transportation Co. another 10-year bus service franchise, approved sale of a Terminal Avenue site for a garage, and sanctioned purchase for $40,500 of property required for approaches to a new Millstream bridge.

Test-Tube Promise Of Practical Reality

No longer is the atom the smallest bit of indestructible matter. Its innermost secrets have been discovered. It can be converted into energy or rearranged to form new matter almost at the will of science. The art of transmutation is now a reality. Progress in pharmacy and medicine is equally striking. Many drugs which were laboriously isolated from nature may now be synthesized economically in the laboratory. Many diseases which formerly terminated life or lingered for months may now be cured in a few days. Day after day, trained scientists study the problems of medicine and pharmacy. Although disappointments far exceed successes, the work goes on. Test-tube promises eventually become practical realities available to you in this pharmacy.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By IRVING STRICKLAND
DAVE STOCK

The United States has developed atomic weapons for use by troops. Do you think they should be used in Korea?

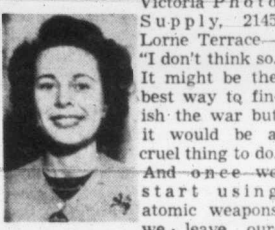

William Land, public accountant, 1517 Burton Avenue—"I don't feel weapons of that description should be used against anyone. Although actually I know little about these new atomic weapons, because there has been so much secrecy about their development."

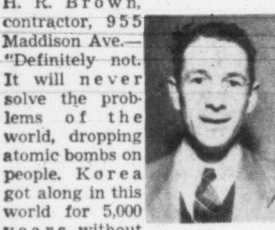

John Armour, student architect with Birley, Wade & Stock, 1715 Fairfield Road—"I think it would be a very foolish thing to do. It would just accentuate the trouble and bring disaster in other areas of the world; Korea is just a stopgap. The consequences would be too severe. There would be nothing to gain."

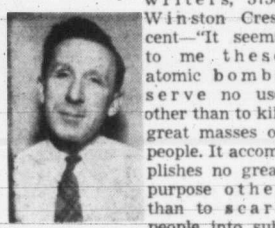

Eileen Harling, bookkeeper at Victoria Photo Supply, 2145 Lorne Terrace—"I don't think so. It might be the best way to finish the war but it would be a cruel thing to do. And once we start using atomic weapons we leave ourselves open to having them used against us."

Peter Brown, office manager of H. R. Brown, contractor, 955 Maddison Ave.—"Definitely not. It will never solve the problems of the world, dropping atomic bombs on people. Korea got along in this world for 5,000 years without any major trouble. Then the whites went in and put things in a mess. We should have left Korea alone if you ask me. Korea would have got along for another 5,000 years without us."

Art Cann, agent for Royal typewriters, 3750 Winston Crescent—"It seems to me these atomic bombs serve no use other than to kill great masses of people. It accomplishes no great purpose other than to scare people into submission. In Korea there are no great cities with big buildings to level like there were at Hiroshima. An atomic blast there would just kill people. It looks to me as if man will eventually destroy himself with his atomic weapons."

$500,000 East Coast Baby Black Market Exposed By Unwed Mother

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (UP)—A $500,000 east coast baby black market was broken because an unwed mother refused to believe her baby was dead.

Ten persons, including five physicians and the ring's alleged "mastermind" lawyer, Marcus S. Siegel, were indicted Thursday by grand juries in three New York boroughs on charges of selling several hundred children for adoption in the past four years.

The indictments in New York, Kings and Queens counties named 52-year-old Siegel as the head of the ring which sold children, mostly to unwed mothers, to childless couples for prices ranging from $1,250 to $4,000. The ring allegedly made $500,000 in the past four years.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Siegel arranged for the sale of at least 89 babies on a "cash and carry basis."

The county district attorneys said through "contacts" Siegel had a list of couples who wanted to adopt babies. Doctors "forwarded" the lawyer infants of unwed or impoverished mothers. Siegel paid the medical expenses of these mothers—ranging from $50 to $200—sometimes, according to the district attorneys, many times the mothers received "nothing."

When the foster parents insisted on legally adopting the infants, Hogan said Siegel demanded additional payment. The "legalizing" was done through the introduction of perjured testimony before the Surrogate's Court of Columbia county at Hudson, N.Y., the New York district attorney said.

The authorities, who conducted a lengthy investigation of the ring's operations, received their first tie-in with Siegel, who is also under indictment in Lynn, Mass., and Baltimore, Md., through an unwed mother who bore a child in a New York hospital.

The attending physician, following the ring's usual operation, contacted Siegel. The Brooklyn lawyer sold the infant to a married couple in Manhattan, having the adoption "legalized" in the Hudson County court.

Several weeks later the infant's mother asked for her child to be returned. She went to Siegel but was given "a run-around."

Meanwhile a falsified death certificate was filed with the city clerk in Lynn and a fake gravestone was shown to the mother. However the mother insisted her child could not be dead and persisted in having the child back. Lynn authorities were brought into the case. They came to New York and discovered the falsified certificate, which led the mother to Siegel and the rest of the ring.

'I BURIED PAW ON TOP OF THE MOUNTAIN'

Army's Rawest Recruit Never Saw An Auto

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 3 (UP)—The rawest recruit in many a year settled into army routine today and officials took his tale of a shoeless childhood in a remote mountain hermitage at face value.

Peter Grainger, a gangling 26-year-old New Mexico prospector's son, told army recruiters he knew there were such things as automobiles, but he had never ridden in one.

He never even heard of the draft. Grainger said he decided to join the service after his father died.

"I buried paw on top of the mountain and then started out to join the army," Grainger said. He was sworn in yesterday. Recruiting officers termed the case apparently "one in a million." They said Grainger was a little upset by army red tape. "I thought they'd just give me a uniform and a gun and send me out to fight," he explained.

Dressed in sheepskin trousers with a shawl over his shoulders, the tall, muscular mountaineer left his boyhood home in northern New Mexico aboard an elderly mule. The mule died, Grainger said, but he walked on to a hilly highway and caught a ride with two men driving to San Antonio.

He said he had never ridden in an automobile before.

"I was a bit scared to get near them at first," he admitted.

On the way here, the two men gave him a flannel shirt, a pair of slacks and what he said was his first pair of shoes. The three of them stopped at a barber shop where Grainger got the second shave of his life.

Grainger was left at the door of the post office here, and found the recruiting station after a heady ride up four floors in an elevator.

"It made me a little sick," he said.

Army T/Sgt. Louis G. Coulter heard his story once and sent him to selective service headquarters. Officials there checked and rechecked, but could find no evidence that Grainger had ever registered for the draft.

Major John Buffin, local recruiting officer, said it was decided finally to accept the rookie soldier and stop searching the records.

It was Grainger's second trip away from the one-room, straw-thatched rock hut where his father lived, he said. The first was a "four or five-day ride" to Beaverhead, a small hill community, when he was 17.

Buffin said Grainger's score of 93 on the armed forces qualification test was above average.

The rough-speaking mountaineers attributed his education to nearly 200 books "Paw and Ol' Doc Carver" bought for him. Among them were an encyclopedia and a copy of Roget's Thesaurus.

Mr. Wismer And The Lake

IN HIS LETTER TO THE TIMES Attorney-General Wismer throws little new light on the future of Strathcona Park but denies any undertaking to protect it. The assumption that Mr. Wismer had promised on behalf of the government not to proceed with the damming of Buttle Lake until the legislature meets in February is categorically denied. Mr. Wismer, though his words left that impression in the public mind—says he made no promise. He was only citing the legal facts of the case.

The legal facts are well known to the readers of this newspaper. The comptroller of water rights has heard varying views on the Buttle power project. He will report shortly to the government. His recommendation, whatever it is, may be appealed to the minister of lands and then to the whole cabinet.

Mr. Wismer says many people do not understand that the cabinet has full legal right to dam the lake, regardless of consequences to the park. This has always been made clear in the Times. Certainly by the 1927 amendment to the Strathcona Park Act the government has this power.

But the point is that the legislature of 1927 adopted this amendment to cover not the present power project but another project, now dead. Whatever the intentions of the legislature of that day may have been, neither the present legislature nor the public has given any verdict on the present project, has ensured the preservation of the park which the legislature established by statute.

The government, from Mr. Wismer's statement in the legislature, had no wish to see this issue faced at the recent session. It wanted the legislature to adjourn as soon as possible without any discussion of the park and without Mr. Wismer's statement which was taken by the public anyway, to mean that nothing final would be done by the government without consulting the legislature again.

Mr. Wismer's denial of any promise is highly significant. Why does he feel it necessary to make this denial so emphatically? Obviously he wants the government to be perfectly free to order the damming of Buttle Lake without interference by the legislature, if the government so decides.

He says the whole question is sub judice of the water comptroller, that the comptroller's report must be considered by the cabinet when it is complete and the issue settled on its merits. He makes an oblique attack on those who, he says, would preserve the park even if all the economic arguments are in favor of destroying it.

What Mr. Wismer neglects to say is that the water comptroller is in no position to decide whether the park shall be destroyed. The comptroller can give his opinion on the need for power development, on the effect of this development on the park. But whether the park is worth preserving, whether it is a greater asset than power development and whether some other source of power should be used—this question the comptroller cannot settle, for it is a political question, a question of government policy and in the end a question which only the legislature should settle.

Mr. Wismer says that the legislature can preserve the park if it wishes by repealing the 1927 legislation, by which the government is entitled to undertake the Buttle Lake power development. This is obvious. But it would seem to indicate that the government has no intention of consulting the legislature if it can avoid such a consultation. It can only be taken to mean that the government, if it decides to dam the lake, will go ahead in the hope that an obedient legislature will not venture to interfere.

Altogether, in view of the Power Commission's desire to dam the lake; in view of the action it has taken already to this end (as if it were sure of the government's favorable decision); and in view of Mr. Wismer's repudiation of any promise to the contrary, the public will conclude that the government, barring any serious protest in the legislature, has made up its mind to sacrifice Strathcona Park for power development and devoutly hopes the legislature will make no trouble about it.

It has always been argued here that the legislature had complete power to sacrifice the park which it created by statute. But it has been argued also that, despite the 1927 amendment, no final action should be taken without full discussion in the legislature and that the government should welcome this discussion. Clearly the government, having avoided a discussion in the recent session, hopes to avoid it in February.

It is for the legislature, and especially for the Vancouver Island members, to make sure that it has the chance to make the final decision. Any member can properly say that he favors the surrender of the park but all members will be derelict in their public duty, and the Island members will be derelict in their specific duty to the Island, if they do not insist on full discussion in the legislature and a standing vote. They will not be excused by the public if they avoid a vote and hide behind Mr. Wismer's convenient legal technicalities.

No Record For Reference

IN HIS SUBMISSION TO THE I.C. and A. Act inquiry board here the other day, R. D. Harvey, K.C., counsel for the Royal Jubilee Hospital Employees' Association, specifically criticized the B.C. Labor Relations Board for its failure to hand down written judgments accompanied by reasons for judgment. The point has been raised on several occasions and merits consideration.

Without written judgments and reasons, members of the legal profession contend, no means exists whereby precedent may be followed and procedure established. No single decision provides a guide for the future. No course of reasoning is recorded. How, ask members of the legal profession, can consistency be expected under these circumstances?

Most other provincial labor boards give written reasons for judgments with the decisions. From them applicants appearing before the boards may chart their courses. Precedent is available to support argument, just as recorded judgments and reasons are available in the courts.

The justification for reference to prior judgments in courts is obvious. Those judgments represent the considered opinions of competent people who have given time, energy and intelligence to the task of determining the logic of arguments, separating the kernel of reasoning from the husk of verbiage.

The legal profession contends it should be the same in hearings before the Labor Relations Board. Without that procedure, each case can be obscured by conflicting arguments whose merits have been determined by preceding decisions—but those decisions cannot be applied in B.C. because no reasons for judgment are handed down here.

Precedent in other courts helps to apply certain facts to certain principles and to furnish a sound judgment on them. Lacking precedent, those appearing before the Labor Relations Board proceed without guide or compass. They may know in which direction they are heading, but they cannot have any assurance that they are following a channel recognized by the board.

Furthermore, the lawyers ask in effect, if no written reasons for judgment are handed down with judgments, how can the act under which the board operates be amended with any certainty that the amendments will be of value?

A properly kept record, they contend, could provide the examples necessary to indicate the changes required in the act. The case presented by the lawyers deserves more than cursory study by the legislature, in which is vested the power to improve the act and its operative agency, the Labor Relations Board.

Chips Off The Old Brock

By DAVID BROCK

KNOWING how simple-minded I am, science is always trying to make things easy for me by saying such things as this: "Well, Dave, let's look at it this way... suppose an electron was the size of a football, then a proton would be much like a mouse, only it wouldn't cheep," or "If the earth was the size of a grapefruit, at one end of a tennis court, the sun would be like a two-pound loaf of bread, cottage-style, at the other end." This is meant to make things plain to me. But it doesn't. It makes me think of everything in terms of golf balls, oranges, buttons, etc. I have got to thinking about Sir James Jeans as an apple (when it was really Newton who was an apple), and I think of Sir Arthur Eddington as a plum, with Einstein as a trick bicycle going backward between them. This does no harm? How can you tell it doesn't?

KEYBORED
HERE is a little key-poem about a key-world. If my accompanist is now sufficiently keyed up, I'll sing it to you, whether you like it or not:

Once upon a time in a key-town
There dwelt a key-man.
He held a key-position
In a key-industry.
In fact, it was not only a key-industry
But a key-bottleneck-industry.
Through his key-efforts
Many key-struggles were won...
In both key-peace and key-war.
Sometimes, of course.

He was helped by key-troops
And key-generals and key-politicians.
But without this key-man
They'd have been no place...

They'd have lost their keys
And got locked out.
Well, one day he felt rather keyed up
Through all this key business
And he said to his doctor:

"Doctor, is that my nerves jangling?"
Which cost him twenty bucks extra.
And the doctor said: "No.
It sounds more like a bunch of keys."

This honest old leech advised him
To find some good wisdom, if any,
And fall in love with her
And marry her a whole lot.
And he made some simple-minded medical jests

About the key to the heart and all that,
And the key-man failed to laugh.
Which cost him twenty bucks extra.
Well, the key-man went out
And he found a fair damsel,
And by a small effort

Of his key-imagination
He managed to fall right bang into love.
"Will you be my key-woman?" he asked.
And she replied:

"I am already a key-woman
Of the ministry of Cogitation.
Where I have a key-job
In a key-office

Where key-plans are laid."
And he said: "Well,
You can be my part-time key-woman anyhow.

And where shall we build our little key-nest
Or keyhole?"

And she said: "Well, the Isle of Man
Is noted for its House of Keys.
And since there isn't any Isle of Woman,
We had better go to the Isle of Man.
As a second choice, hm?

Though I might as well inform you,
My key-love,
That we key-women are fighting the good fight

To have an island named
The Isle of Man and Woman.
Especially Woman with extra voting rights

In proportions of about two to one.
We women are vitally interested
In key-problems and key-things.
We get as keyed-up as anything."

"I was trying NOT to get keyed-up,"
Said the key-man.
"That's why I went to a key-doctor.
Kindly unlock my heart again
And let me out of here."

Next week, instead of telling you about key-men and key-women, I shall tell you about top-men, top-women, and top-secrets. And by the way, a special prize is being offered to anyone who has ever heard of a key-secret instead of a top-secret.

GIDDY-AP
THERE was a book advertisement in Country Life about a text on Light House Keeping. Now, I've heard about books on Light Housekeeping and Light-house Keeping and so on, but nary a one on Light Housekeeping. This is a new one on me entirely. It reminds me of the new novel I am going to write about Light Housekeeping. I couldn't write a text on this subject, but I could write a novel. So could anyone. Many a chap has made a little gold mine out of it.

Today there is a feverish rush to build atom bombs and enroll nations in the North Atlantic Treaty. "The only way to win a war is to prevent it." To discuss differences seated around a table is the civilized and the U.N. way.

Canada is young and could set an example to the older nations, bound by tradition, into new pastures of thought.
The contrast of the cheers of people and the blast of guns on the arrival of the Princess and the Duke was disturbing.
Canada should pioneer a more peaceful expression of her love.

I believe the most heartfelt gift the U.N. could receive on this sixth anniversary would be for a sponsor nation to ask the Security Council to request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on Article 51 of the U.N. Charter in this crucial year of 1951.

FRENCH EXPERT
There appeared in the Times of Oct.
17 story that would have made all-round good reading had the reporter, in his anxiety to show off his knowledge of the French language, not gone beyond the innocent expressions such as "Zut alors!" which is the equivalent of the English "Aw, shucks!"

But when he stooped to the use of words which no self-respecting Frenchman would ever use in the presence of ladies or in the press, a complexion of vulgarity was given to the whole story!

While the English profane words used by some people (although never in respectable society or in the press) are much more offensive than those used by the reporter in question, they are never-

Mr Peeps' Diary

Being A Chronicle Of Our Times

MONDAY, 29th—Up early this morning, resolved to get about my affairs with dispatch, but Lord! how vexsome it is, with frost chilling the coverlets. At my place of business, fell briskly to correspondence, and dispatched some hundred of letters and pamphlets, the greatest number for one day this year. Later to the hotel to visit Master Norman Hyland and his wife, poor wretch, who hath a sore taking in the throat. And he was irked to the blood with the mean lodgings they've given him. We discoursed of family affairs, and sat so lately that my wife feared to miss the concert of music at the Theatre Royal. But we arrived in time for the Tchaikovsky, and found the orchestra much improved, though methinks the "Pathe-tique" would create broader stir if the third movement were the last, it causing people to stamp their feet and cry out. Thence home, where I read a chapter of "Melville Goodwin," by Master Marquand; and so world-weary doth his style become that I had difficulty in turning pages, and presently fell into deep slumber.

TUESDAY, 30th—A woman writes me this day that my dog's health can be improved on bicarbonate of soda, but suggests I should try it first, so that no harm will befall the dog; and this is a pretty sentiment! Rejoicing in the flavor of the air, which hath the nip and tang of a winsome apple, strolled through city streets to the customers, where I purposed to buy a sock & buckskin for my boy, the better to dissemble on All Hallow's Eve. Anon, after much amiable pawing of finery with Mistress White, my boy will be a monkey and my girl a Chinese witch, which doth please them mightily. To lunch with Master Hutchison, Master Quinn and Master Rich Holston, he that hath writ "Grass Beyond the Mountains," a story greatly praised. And I found him to be a rangy, twinkling fellow; quick to laugh, and somewhat brandied by his wife's decision he'd wear a Homburg hat, and cast aside his sombrero while moving among gentle folk. Idling in the sun, we met Master Rebel Mowat, who pronounced himself much interested in literature, having just finished reading a trenchant book, "I Was a Communist, by Josef Stalin." And, having delivered himself of this jape, Master Mowat went rolling down the street, in veritable paroxysms of laughter. At the hotel, I chatted betimes with Master Torchy Anderson, a native son of this city who hath attained the editorship of a journal across the water; and Master Robert P. Brown, who celebrates next year a half century in the game of baseball. Thence home for a joint with congenial friends, their farewell much enlivened by a demonstration of how to unfold a push-cart for the game of golf, which ended in the utmost confusion, and the highest pitch of mirth.

WEDNESDAY, 31st—Never have these tired old eyes witnessed a more pleasant prospect than that beyond Oak Bay this morning: the waters leaden, the sky a pale aquamarine, and Mount Baker in jagged relief before the early sun, like a steel engraving. I stood admiring this view, and inhaling the bracing airs, and thanked God I was alive in this most excellent country. At my place of business, many remote and petty affairs, which irritate and consume time, but must be attended. I strolled through the streets without my coat, having dispatched it for a cleaning, and was much chided by Master Justin Harbord, who offered to remove his own, but only briefly. Thence to the counting-house, and Lord! how my gettings pall before my layings-out. Anon I encountered Master Waldo Skillings, that virile alderman, and we went to Chinatown to purchase sparklers and Roman candles and fireworks for our children. We sat awhile, discoursing of politics, which go with ill temper, and smoked a cheroot. Thus away home, where much frabjous bustle of the moppets, the Chinese witch and the monkey departing with wild, gleeful shouts and large bags for "tricks and treats." I laid aside some bon-bons on sticks; horehounds, jelly beans and other sweetmeats; but no callers came to this remote eyrie, the steps being too formidable for tiny legs. Which distressed me. Anon to Oak Bay, where a huge bonfire crackled on the sward, and children with grotesque trappings revelled in simple sports, and were handed sausage pasties by Master Fred Norris and his clubmen. And the community spirit was fine to behold. Thus home to listen to an account of Her Royal Highness' reception abroad; and the homespun, honest greeting of the American president was a great relief from the pompous declamations of lesser personages.

THURSDAY, 1st—A noble day with which to begin the month, the panorama from my porch a lustrous etching of snow and sea. Rolling, through the streets at an early hour, I saw Master Sidney Crawley industriously raking up leaves. At my club, ate some spinach, the greatest of vegetables, and marvelled at the clear tenor voice of Dr. Frank Harwood in the National Anthem, which he sings with rare fervor. Anon I chatted with Master Frank Dougherty, learning that he hath already purveyed some $300 of tickets for a show of Rotary Vaudeville, dem'd fine. At the beginning of the week. Which will benefit the kiddies of the Solarium and that excellent force, the Salvation Army. For supper, I sat me down with 100 newspaper boys and found these amiable rascals in rare spirits, having discharged their duties with honor and won many prizes. The champion being a person-able lad by name Lloyd Mackey, who hath sold 67 new subscriptions to this journal, and won himself a fine bicycle. Now here present was Monsieur Roger Leger who, when introduced, was greeted with such immense cheers, whistles, shouts and stamping of feet that I was sore afraid the plaster would give way. Thus off, much gladdened by these cheerful coils, to the home of Master Frank Mack, where we sipped some grog and were mighty, civilly merry. Thence lately home to fitful repose.

FRIDAY, 2nd.—At lunch, fell into a lunatic debate with the Hon. Edward T. Kenney as to who was the better Canadian, the basis of decision being the time spent in each of the ten provinces of this land. But it came out all even, I holding 10 provinces to his nine and he greater years on both coasts. Whereupon we decided that we were equally good; drained a pot of stout, and departed friends.

Opinions Of Our Correspondents

SET EXAMPLE

On Oct. 24, six years ago, the Charter of the United Nations came into force to settle international differences peacefully, develop international law, and enroll United Nations police to maintain order. For success this meant a revolution in our thinking and the combining of our efforts to change public opinion to accept this new way. The limiting of national sovereignty should have been the objective of progressive writers.

Today there is a feverish rush to build atom bombs and enroll nations in the North Atlantic Treaty. "The only way to win a war is to prevent it." To discuss differences seated around a table is the civilized and the U.N. way.

Canada is young and could set an example to the older nations, bound by tradition, into new pastures of thought. The contrast of the cheers of people and the blast of guns on the arrival of the Princess and the Duke was disturbing. Canada should pioneer a more peaceful expression of her love.

I believe the most heartfelt gift the U.N. could receive on this sixth anniversary would be for a sponsor nation to ask the Security Council to request an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on Article 51 of the U.N. Charter in this crucial year of 1951.

WILLIAM MITCHELL,

FRENCH EXPERT
There appeared in the Times of Oct. 17 story that would have made all-round good reading had the reporter, in his anxiety to show off his knowledge of the French language, not gone beyond the innocent expressions such as "Zut alors!" which is the equivalent of the English "Aw, shucks!"

But when he stooped to the use of words which no self-respecting Frenchman would ever use in the presence of ladies or in the press, a complexion of vulgarity was given to the whole story!

While the English profane words used by some people (although never in respectable society or in the press) are much more offensive than those used by the reporter in question, they are nevertheless just as much in flagrant opposition to God's third Commandment: "Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His Name in vain. (Exodus XX:7).

The public like to look to the press, if not as a teacher of religion yet, at least as a respecter of the Majesty on High and of the faith in God of the many who caused this Canada of ours to be called the land of a Christian nation which shrinks from the blasphemous use of the Name which is above every name!

L. J. ECKMAN,

PRECEDENCE

I, too, have noticed in one of the church advertisements in the Saturday evening paper, "try Christianity."

Those men who call themselves "ministers" and who were presented to the Princess recently while here, certainly could have given us a practical example of Christianity at this time by allowing, say, perhaps children of the Orphanage and Solarium to be presented instead of themselves.

Undoubtedly Christ would have done such.

DISGUSTED.

New Departure

London Free Press

When Canada became a signatory to the North Atlantic Treaty certain obligations were assumed. Now we see one of these promises implemented in the sailing for Europe of the first members of the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade. They are to be stationed at Hannover where they will be integrated within the army which General Eisenhower is organizing for the defence of Western Europe.

How many more will follow, or what the eventual size of Canadian air aid to Western Europe is to be, will depend on developments. Once we joined N.A.T.O. there was never any question of how much we would give if circumstances should become emergent. Weapons alone are not enough. The sending of men is an assurance of Canadian partnership in N.A.T.O.

It is a new policy for this country to maintain armies abroad in times of peace, but these are different years, not really times of peace, as we used to understand the word.

LAST CHAPTER

I write to ask what use are the continual letters by L. S. Pepper?

Are they seeking information, or seeking to instruct?

I write seeking information. Can a man of little more than 70 years' (at most) experience of life answer the questions where from, what for, and where to?

Barring divine revelation he can only guess, is it not so?

As regards the accidents and inefficiencies that may be apparent to observers in his short journey he cannot judge, for no man can judge a book unless he has read it from beginning to end, and this goes for the book of creation, presupposing a definite purpose and final fruition.

COMPLAINT AND REMEDY
On behalf of many people who use the bus service at Royal Oak, I wish to voice a complaint and suggest a remedy.

For many years people have stood out in the rain and snow at Royal Oak while waiting for a bus, yet nothing has been done towards erecting a shelter. Even though our council have been asked time and again to do something about it.

Some time ago I asked the bus company what they would do. But they would only give $20, which would hardly erect a seat at the present lumber prices.

However, a man at Royal Oak offered $50, which made a total of $70. I didn't think this was quite enough, so I asked the council if they would pay any additional costs, but they refused on the grounds that it was up to the people who use the bus to erect a shelter.

Personally I believe they are wrong, as people come here from all the municipality to pay their taxes and transact other business. Surely it is up to the council to do something for the people who use the bus service, even from a business standpoint. Furthermore, the cost to the taxpayers for a shelter would be almost negligible.

If something isn't done soon I suggest that we, the ratepayers, elect some five councillors, if possible, at the next election who will be able to see the needs of the people.

'Business First' Marks Mood Of Commons As Old-Age Pensions Plan Gets Priority

By MICHAEL BARKWAY, Correspondent of Saturday Night and The Victoria Daily Times, From Ottawa

THE House of Commons has started its business in an unusually business-like way this session. The much-heralded debate about the cost of living turned out to be a bit of a flop. Members still mutter on the Opposition benches that this is a "cost of living session," and no doubt they'll go on talking about it whenever they get a chance.

But most of the steam really went out of it when George Drew refused to support the C.C.F. amendment asking for full price controls, and when the Prime Minister made a lengthy and almost humbling reply to Drew's opening attack.

Mr. St. Laurent, obviously, is no bumbler. He thinks rather more quickly than the next man, and has a lifetime's experience (as a lawyer) in thinking on his feet. It seemed as though it must have been deliberate when he made his reply to Drew into such an anti-climax.

Drew's attack was not extreme in any way; but it was delivered, as most of his speeches are, on a sustained note at full volume. He is like an organist who plays all the time with an open diapason on the "great" organ.

Mr. St. Laurent, following him, got up in an avuncular, conversational way. He had a lot of papers on his desk and he fumbled with them. He paused again and again, and looked for another one. He behaved like an amateur; and after a while it got pretty tedious.

This was the occasion when Mr. St. Laurent read out his long list of comparative prices of various goods at a chain store in Washington, D.C., and in Ottawa. His list may or may not have carried conviction to housewives. It probably didn't convert anyone. But it became laughable when the Prime Minister was getting corrections to his list from Mr. Abbott, and correcting himself like this: "Oh, that coffee price. I'm sorry that wasn't Chase and Sanborn's. It was the A. & P.'s own brand, Chase and Sanborn's sells at Loblaw's."

It was all done with much seriousness; but really it was difficult to believe that the object of the whole performance was not to reduce the "great debate" about high prices to a level near "absurdity." The heat was dissipated as though through a huge radiator.

Certainly after Mr. Drew's and Mr. St. Laurent's speeches there was no parliamentary voice left outside the C.C.F. to advocate price controls. The Conservatives have settled themselves down to the policy of blaming the government for having allowed a bad situation to arise and for allowing it to continue. They are not trying to say what the government should do about it. And this is perfectly proper tactics for the opposition.

The government was wise to interrupt the debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne to introduce some of its important legislation. The introduction of specific matters helped to check the lengthy speeches—which sometimes hold up the House for weeks in the Throne Speech debate.

BLESSED BY ALL
The old-age pensions scheme, of course, has been blessed by all parties; and the only question now is to get parliamentary approval for Mr. Abbott's financial proposals: 2% on personal income tax with a limit of $60 a year; 2% on corporation tax, and 2% of the existing 10% sales tax.

This last is something of a concession to the current budget surplus. When Mr. Abbott increased the sales tax from 8% to 10% last spring, he thought he would need the extra revenue for general purposes. To earmark it now specifically for the pensions is to admit that he doesn't need it in the general revenues.

Public To View Fine, New Hotel

Largest building in North Saanich, the new Hotel Sidney, will be officially opened for public inspection Sunday from 1 to 5 o'clock. Every opportunity will be given residents of the Saanich Peninsula and the Gulf Islands to inspect the handsome new hotel.

A. M. Dore, proprietor of Hotel Sidney, takes understandable pride in the imposing new business establishment. He is anxious that the public accept his invitation to see the type of hotel which has been erected.

Members of the Sidney Junior Band will play at the new hotel during the afternoon while the inspection is proceeding.

Those who visit the new structure on Sunday will realize at once that the $150,000 hotel is a distinct asset to this growing community.

Main entrance to the lobby of the hotel is at the corner of Beacon Avenue and First Street. The lobby is large and attractively finished in walnut and mahogany. A cheery fireplace of granite adds materially to the room.

At the left is the modern coffee shop, with seats arranged at an oval counter. Every modern device for the sanitary handling of food has been installed. Ample refrigeration is a further safeguard. The main dining room occupies the northeast corner of the ground floor while at the rear is a commodious banquet room for larger functions. All furnishings are complete and the kitchen will be the envy of many lady visitors on Sunday.

WIDE EXPERIENCE

E. E. Castner, a thoroughly experienced restaurateur, will operate the dining rooms in the new hotel. He is former owner and operator of Heglund's Coffee Shop, Glen Coffee Shop, Liberty Cafe and Mayfair Cafe in Victoria.

His son, R. M. Castner, will be associated with his father in the dining room, banquet room and coffee shop.

At the rear of the ground floor of the hotel is located the beverage room which is entered from First Street. Indirect lighting has been installed throughout and fine hardwoods add to the impressiveness of the surroundings. Tables and chairs are the best obtainable.

Latest glass sterilizing equipment is an internal part of the bar, ensuring the "maximum" of sanitation. The sterilizer is electrically driven and has a capacity of more than one glass a second.

B.C. Will Ask Dominion For New Tax Agreement

British Columbia will renew taxation negotiations with Ottawa in the near future.

The current five-year agreement terminates April 1, 1952. Under Ottawa's new proposal, outlined in the last conference in December, B.C. stands to gain about $1,000,000. This, however, is offset by new old-age pension legislation—closely tied in with the taxation talks—which will cost this province an additional $2,000,000 next year.

The new plan, if approved, would raise the guaranteed minimum payment to B.C. from $18,000,000, as set out in the 1947 agreement, to $30,000,000. In this present year, B.C. got $30,331,000 from its tax rental.

In 1941, when the Wartime Tax Agreement was framed, B.C. got a fixed payment of $12,500,000. When renewed in 1947, the minimum amount B.C. could get was set at $18,000,000 but there was an escalator clause placed in the agreement. This allowed the rental payment to fluctuate according to a formula based on the population of B.C. and the "gross national product."

Because of this agreement, the rental payments received by B.C. rose steadily. By 1950 it had risen to $27,100,000 and this year it is $30,331,000.

In addition to its revenue from rental of tax fields, B.C. receives 80 cents per capita from Ottawa under terms of the British North America Act. Payment since the 1941 census has been $654,000 annually. When the recently completed census results are announced, B.C. expects to receive a substantial increase in this amount.

Another beautiful granite fireplace has been constructed in the beverage room. Floors are of tile and the entire room is attractively finished.

The second story, which is reached by a convenient stairway, is bright and airy. Floors are entirely carpeted and the 20 modern hotel rooms are commodious and beautifully finished. Modern bedroom suites ensure the comfort of guests at Hotel Sidney and a private telephone exchange links all the rooms.

Majority of the rooms have bathrooms, although a number of the more reasonable priced ones are not so equipped. An attractive color scheme has been carried out throughout the entire hotel. No expense has been spared in providing the maximum of comfort for hotel guests.

Mrs. Luella Dore, wife of the proprietor, planned and selected the interior decorations for the hotel. Furnishings also were chosen by Mrs. Dore to suit the effective color arrangements.

Refrigeration and heating equipment is located in the hotel's basement. Two modern oil furnaces are installed, either one of which can heat the structure comfortably with the other available as a standby.

Exterior of the hotel is of stucco in a pleasing color combination. There is a large parking ground at the rear which will be hard-surfaced. Lawns and flower gardens will be planted in front of the hotel next spring.

A staff of 25 men and women will be required for the full operation of the hotel, releasing a new and substantial payroll in Sidney. All departments of the hotel will be in full operation Monday.

Half Million In Modern Machines Open To View In Newest Bake-Shop

Half a million dollars worth of modern bakery plant will be inspected Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings when Weston Bakeries Ltd. hold "open house" in their new premises on Fairview Road in Victoria West.

The huge white stucco building formerly occupied by the Western Match Company, after 18 months of renovation, now houses the most modern baking equipment obtainable, with a staff of 75 employees.

2,600 LOAVES PER HOUR

Timing of the bread-making process is based on production of 2,600 loaves per hour. From the overhead mixer the bread dough is poured down a chute to the automatic "dividers," which weighs and divides the dough into four loaf-weight portions at a time.

A travelling belt takes the portions along to a "rounder," from which the ball-shaped pieces travel to an overhead "proofer," where the loaves-to-be spend 15 minutes travelling slowly through a temperature of 90 degrees. Next automatic equipment encountered is the molder, where the round-shaped balls of dough are rolled flat, to eliminate "bubbles," then shaped and placed in baking pans.

One hour in the second

"proofer" at 100 degrees follows, before the loaves are moved into the huge travelling oven. Oil heated and completely electrically controlled, the largest of the two big ovens is 45 feet long and 14 feet wide.

Aside from more pleasant work surroundings, employees are protected by a pension plan, and medical service scheme covering them and their families, as well as insurance.

Free, compulsory complete medical examinations each year form part of the Weston policy.

Greater Victoria citizens inspecting the plant during the hours of "open house," from 7 to 9 in the evening of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, will watch one of North America's most modern bakeries in production. Normally operating a day-shift only, the plant will operate especially for the evening inspections.

FREE TRANSPORT

Free bus transportation will be provided to and from the plant on all three evenings, from 6.40 p.m. on, with buses leaving every 10 minutes from the intersection of Yates and Douglas Street.

Special attention is being paid to arrangements that will enable women and children to see the baking process, and the management is stressing the fact that the "open house" is for the public, with no formalities involving dignitaries or cutting of tapes.

Chrysanthemums on display during the inspection will be those grown by Weston Bakeries

INSULATION KNOWN TO PRIMITIVE MAN

Insulation has been important for thousands of years in Man's search for comfort, whether he lived in polar regions or in equatorial deserts. The first insulation was protective clothing. Then Man found that certain types of building materials made his shelter far more comfortable. But as recently as 30 years ago, insulation was used mainly to conserve heat and fuel. Today, insulation makes jungle temperatures endurable.

The purpose of insulation is to retard the passage of heat, either from inside to outside, or from outside to inside a building. Insulation does this by acting as a barrier to slow down the rate of heat travel.

In choosing insulation, be sure to ask these questions:

- (1) Is it efficient?
- (2) Is it firePROOF, not merely "fire resistant"?
- (3) Is it permanent, or will it deteriorate in time, making replacement and expensive repairs to the building itself necessary?
- (4) Is it verminproof, particularly rat and mouseproof?
- (5) Can complete coverage be assured?

One insulation that meets all these requirements is expanded vermiculite. It has the added advantage of being easy to install. No special equipment is needed. Vermiculite flows readily from the bag into hard-to-reach corners and around pipes, wires and other obstructions, to make a full, uniform thickness. It is so lightweight that it can be handled by a woman or child.

Vermiculite comes packed in four-cubic-foot bags. One bag will cover 17 square feet three inches thick. Expanded vermiculite is sold under a variety of trade names.

Veteran Y.F.C. Worker Began Ministry In City

Gordon McLean, speaker at tonight's Youth for Christ rally at the Evangelistic Auditorium, is a teen-ager, but he can look back on a unique record of accomplishment in Christian service.

Coming from Regina, Sask., as a boy of 10, he began touring with a Gospel team as speaker on Vancouver Island.

At 15, he assumed the directorship of Victoria, B.C., "Youth for Christ," and thus became the youngest of Y.F.C.'s more than 2,000 "rally" leaders. Under his guidance, the Victoria rally grew and was put on a weekly basis. A city-wide campaign, a huge outdoor rally attended by more than 2,000 and a "World Vision Week" with Dr. Bob Cook and other Y.F.C. leaders taking part were products of this teen-ager's leadership.

Upon graduation from high school—and still only 15—Gordon went into full-time Y.F.C. work, allowing him to concentrate on ever-increasing rally responsibilities. Later on, he resigned the Victoria directorship to enter what he considered a needy and neglected field—reaching teenagers in the jails, prisons and detention homes.

Today much of his time is devoted to conducting programs and counselling with young fellows in difficulties with the law. The program—called youth guidance—is now part of the Pacific northwest regional Y.F.C. activities operating from the Washington State Training School at Chehalis, Washington.

As well as the institutional work, he has appeared in numerous rallies and churches of more than a dozen denominations leading the singing and speaking.

THE CHURCH PAGE

By LANCE H. WHITTAKER

One of the most intriguing stories of the Royal visit was carried in an Associated Press dispatch from Washington yesterday.

A thorn tree, said by tradition to date back to the time of Christ and to bloom when royalty is near, has put forth four blossoms—with Princess Elizabeth there.

The tree is Washington Cathedral's Glastonbury thorn. That tree, according to legend, grew from the staff of Joseph of Arimathea, the man who took Christ down from his cross. Joseph is said to have gone to the British Isles, and where Glastonbury now stands, to have thrust his staff into the ground to claim the isle for Christ. The staff, the story goes, took root, and grew into the Glastonbury thorn.

In the Middle Ages it became custom to pluck a bloom from the revered tree when royalty came near, and present the flower in a silver box.

Canon Charles Martin, headmaster of St. Alban's School at Washington Cathedral, an Episcopal church, told the Washington Post the cathedral thorn had three times bloomed when royalty visited Washington. Other times, it is said, it blooms only at Christmas.

The Princess and the Duke of Edinburgh visited the cathedral Friday and Princess Elizabeth received a bloom from the famous thorn, in a tiny silver box.

The story, apocryphal or not, is a charming one and demonstrates how our southern neighbors cherish customs which had their origin in the old land.

Well-Known Youth Leader Here

The Victoria presbytery of the United Church Young People's Union will hear an interesting speaker when they gather tonight for their annual rally.

Rev. Horace Burkholder has done outstanding work in the field of religious education among young people. He came to this province from Ontario in 1937 and acted as summer camp director both for the Religious Education Council of Canada and for the United Church. Camps at Ocean Park on the mainland, Kootenay in the Kootenays, and Sylvan Lake in Alberta have benefited from the fresh, invigorating approach he and Mrs. Burkholder brought to young people's counselling.

After several years as religious education secretary for British Columbia, Mr. Burkholder is now minister in the Mountain View church, Vancouver, but his interest in youth work continues.

Few Y.P.U. gatherings are complete without his presence, and his attendance at the Victoria presbytery will be a highlight of the conference this weekend.

Korean Missionary To Speak

Rev. Robert Chung, who speaks Tuesday at the Church of the Nazarene, 2721 Graham Street (off Hillside), next Tuesday, will bring a message direct from the Korean war front.

He has recently arrived with his family in the United States, having escaped from Seoul, Korea, the southern capital, just before the Communists overran the city. He lost all his possessions, but was able to escape with the members of his family and lived in Pusan until he was able to secure passage to the United States.

Following his graduation from Asbury College in 1925, Robert Chung returned to his native Korea and began preaching the Gospel, where he has had an active ministry for nearly 25 years. He has been in great demand as a guest speaker for various denominations, and his message has been largely accepted among his own people. The first year of his return to Korea saw over 6,000 people converted. He has held tent meetings in most of the large cities in Korea and many in Manchuria.

He will speak on present-day Korea at 8 Tuesday evening in the Church of the Nazarene.

Stampeders Gets Corralled

Calgary Stampeders came out of the icy reaches of the prairie hoping to warm things up for Victoria Cougars Friday night. Unfortunately for the Stamps, they ran into a ball of fire in the person of Jim Shirley, Cougars' netminder. Jim was "on" as the expression goes, and he put Calgary back into deep freeze by scoring an impressive 3-0 shutout. Some helpful checking, a little of which coach Roger Leger moves Calgary's George Agar, aided Shirley no end. While Rog puts the clamp on Agar, Shirley looks rather alarmed as he watches the puck coming his way. The shutout was his first.

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

When Tommy Restell used to manage baseball teams in the city, he had the pleasant habit of trotting over from his first-base position; patting the pitcher on the seat of his trousers; whispering words of encouragement in his ear, and scampering back to his post.

That was many years ago in the life of Tommy Restell, but not too many to be recalled by those who helped build amateur baseball up to its wartime peak.

Tommy was a first baseman then. It was his idea to give the youngsters a chance. He minded not if the scared young nipper got his ears pinned back. One game wasn't that important to Tommy. He was doing a job; doing it in his way; doing a job for youth. Every one received an even break. That's the way Tommy played it and that's the lesson he taught.

And about the same era, though time cheats a little now and then, Tommy was what might be called one of the best goalkeepers in city football. Soccer fans will remember—a champion always behaves like a champion.

And it was no different two years ago when Tommy was asked to serve as manager of the Victoria United football team. He turned down the request. Only Tommy knows how often. But later, he accepted. And United football has been on the upswing since that time. A check of the records will stop the doubting Thomases in their tracks.

It wouldn't be truthful to say that Tommy relished the job. He knew the trials and tribulations of a manager. But he also knew what must be done.

The kids always got a break. And so United's youth movement started. He was again willing to let youngsters take their place in the sun. He and George Kulal.

There were cliques on the United as there had been in the past; as there are now; as there undoubtedly will be in the future. It was Tommy's unenviable position to mold the dissenters into a happy family. He did it in baseball; and he almost accomplished the trick with United.

Five days ago Tommy called the whole thing off. Things just weren't working out. It wasn't for the lack of team success. United had only lost one game in five; had broken away to the best start any United team ever did; was being touted as championship material, and had done so through the efforts of Restell's policy of giving youth an even break.

Only Nice Guys Go Quietly

Tommy didn't say why he packed it up—just a note to club president George Eade. He didn't want to stir up any trouble. He isn't that type, although others have differed with his opinions in the past. Tommy never used to hold a grudge. It isn't to be imagined that he does now. True, he is entitled to his own opinions, as are others. But something just didn't jell and Tommy didn't like it.

Perhaps he thought he was to blame. Perhaps the conflict of personalities ruffled his outward calm. There is such a situation on United as there is bound to be on any All-Star club.

Tommy helped to make United an All-Star club, just like he has always wanted to achieve the ultimate.

He went out quietly the way he wished.

Only the real nice guys go out that way.

Future Teachers Enjoy Complete Sport Program

The Provincial Normal School full scale sports program which will reach its peak when the annual Vancouver Normal School Invasion takes place next spring, is well under way.

There is 100 per cent participation as every student takes part in the program as part of his or her training.

Thursday the basketball team lost out 30-27 in its first game, after taking a 14-11 halftime lead, against former students of the school.

The team is currently preparing for the Hocking Cup series, which bauble it won last year.

The soccer eleven made its debut Friday and was blanked 3-0 by Victoria College.

Other sports

Badminton and table tennis clubs have been formed and swimming, bowling and volleyball clubs are in the process of being organized.

The table tennis club held its first tournament and crowned as champions Doug Nerligan and Marg Taylor. Doug lost the first game 22-24 to Jim McClelland but came back to take the second two, 21-18 and 23-21.

Salmon Honored By Presidency

Peter Salmon, crack Victoria swim star, has been elected president of the first-year class of medical students at the University of Washington.

The former British Empire Games and Olympic Games star will be swimming for the Huskies in conference competition this season.

Abbott Out For Six Weeks As Cougars Topple Cowboys

Shirley Scores Shutout; Canucks To Show Tonight

By BILL WALKER
Victoria 3, Calgary 0

Joy was tempered with sobriety in the Cougar camp Friday night, the Cowboys from Calgary foothills having been unseated, 3-0. Reg Abbott, centre of the "kid line," which the injury jinx struck last year, was in hospital with a shoulder separation.

Hit with a terrific bodycheck in the first period, Abbott skated off the ice, not to return for a possible six weeks, while his mates went on from there to snap a three-game losing streak.

The loss of the baby-face pivot means a fast shuffle for coach Roger Leger tonight with the still winless Vancouver Canucks in town for their first venture on Memorial Arena ice.

But from appearances, Leger has no other choice but to again toss Eddie Dorohoy into the hole between Bob Frampton and Andy Heberton. And if Dorohoy can sparkle as he did against the Stampeders two goals, and both well earned—that situation will be temporarily solved.

However, a more serious rupture may be the result as it means a possible complete re-vamping of the other forward units. Fred Hildebrand will be inserted into the void left by Abbott. He will likely alternate with Leon Bouchard on a new unit centred by Jack McIntyre and flanked by Bob Bowness.

ROBINSON DISCLOSES SECRET

Dressen To Return As Brooklyn Mentor

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (UP)—Jackie Robinson may have tipped the Brooklyn Dodgers' hand when he declared that Charley Dressen will be back to manage the club next season.

Robinson, who participated in U.C.L.A.'s homecoming parade last night, revealed Friday that club owner Walter O'Malley announced he would present Dressen with a new one-year contract.

The Dodgers' negro star said O'Malley made the statement following the final game of the National League playoff against the New York Giants.

The Dodgers have scheduled a press conference at their Brooklyn office Monday, presumably to announce their 1952 managerial plans. Robinson thus may have prematurely disclosed the retention of Dressen.

"When O'Malley announced in the clubhouse after the playoffs that Dressen would be back, we all cheered," Robinson said. "I'm certainly glad he's going to be back and we'll prove that we're behind him."

Robinson denied that a Dodge collapse during the playoff allowed the National League pennant to fall into Giant hands.

"You can't take it away from Leo Durocher and his club," he said. "They played great baseball in the clutch and proved to be a fine team."

Robinson also blasted Birdie Tebbets who said in a speech recently that all the clubs were glad to see Dressen lose, and that Dressen "showed lack of sympathy and understanding for his players as well as poor sportsmanship several times during the past season."

"Did Tebbets ever play for Dressen? Robinson asked. "Of course he didn't. If he had played for him, Tebbets wouldn't have talked like he did."

Watson In Mat Prelim

Matchmaker Nick Harris has named Roy Speller and Dick Watson to appear in the local bout on the wrestling card at the Bay Street Armory tonight.

On the main event, Chief Thunderbird and logger Jack MacDonold will twist arms in a grudge bout which will have no time limit.

Jack Kiser will meet Tarzan Potvin in the semi-main event, and George Gallagher and George Strickland will battle it out in the special event. Opening bout starts at 8.30.

Monarchs In Third Defeat By Clippers

A couple of teams almost posted their first league victories in B.C. senior amateur hockey play Friday night but couldn't quite make it.

Kerrisdale Monarchs dropped a 4-3 verdict to Nanaimo Clippers in the Pacific Coast circuit after being three goals down. It was Kerrisdale's third straight loss to the Islanders, though they have a win in inter-league play.

'Who's Got The Team, Who's Got The Fight?'

Basketball at Victoria High School is big business. The players are avid, the coaches intent and the fans enthusiastic. But no one is more serious or more proud of their jobs than the "rah-rah kids," the cheer leaders. Rising over the shouts of the fans and the grunts and groans of the players comes the rhythmic chant of (left to right) Belle Luscombe, Eddie Lou and Gerry Koski, and they implore the Vic High team to "do or die" for their alma mater. They shouted themselves hoarse Friday night but to no avail as the Totems were defeated by the ex-Totems.

VIC HIGH HOOP AWAY

Grads Teach Totems Smart Cage Lesson

One of the largest crowds ever to attend the annual Vic High Totems-ex-Totems hoop homecoming did not go home disappointed Friday night. The roaring throng witnessed one of the hardest-fought contests ever to be played at the Fernwood gymnasium with the ex-grads winning a close 26-19 victory over their younger rivals.

The Porky Andrews-coached Totems, although experiencing difficulty in finding the hemp, put on a smart performance. Coming together again after one or two years apart the grads played a wide-open game. Jack Shields was the V.H.S. standout both defensively and offensively, pacing Totems with eight points. Bucketman Jim Jahraus and forward Bob Clark were also outstanding for the high school squad.

Gerry Parker and Cedric Robb led the ex-Totems with six points each. Parker showing some of the form he used when he made the first B.C. All-Star team in 1949, while Robb played a driving game all the way.

Severson A Hooper, Too

Whitely Severson of recent lacrosse fame, scored 12 points Friday night to lead the Orphans to a 50-32 victory over the Brentwood Aces in a Saanich and Suburban Basketball League fixture at Brentwood.

Bernie Clarkson aided the Orphans' cause by pushing up 10, while Bill Benn and Bill Jones shared scoring honors for Aces with 1 points each.

Lady Called Luck Asked To Smile On Yanks Again

By OSCAR FRALEY
(United Press Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (UP)—The 1952 baseball season appeared destined to prove whether they're really "the lucky Yankees."

For three straight years the world champions have overcome apparently insurmountable obstacles—mostly in the line of injuries—to win the American League flag and then the world series. The outright comment was that you have to beat not only them but Lady Luck, too.

But from the post-season returns on three of their aging pitchers, the Yankees are going to need all their luck in 1952. Those in question are burly Vic Raschi, chunky Ed Lopat and powerful Allie Reynolds. It is a trio which accounted for 59 of the Yankee victories last season and even the loss of one of them would hurt. Two down would be crippling and if all three lost their effectiveness it would be fatal to the hopes of the Bronx Bombers.

Raschi already has undergone an operation which may—and may not—restore him to full stride for next season. The slinging strong man, who this year won 21 games against 10 losses and led the league with 164 strikeouts, has had a loose cartilage removed from his right knee at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The knee was injured in 1950 and then hurt again last season. The Yankees kept it secret, for big Vic was unable to field bunts with his accustomed ability. But it was painful and was the real reason why he was removed in the last game of the World Series.

This is the same type injury which shortened the career of Tommy Henrich. And Raschi, at 33, isn't too good an operation risk. So the Yankees will need another smile from the lady called Luck.

In the case of Reynolds she'd better give them an outright laugh. For Indian Allie is the big man of the Yankee staff and probably in line to receive the league's most valuable player award.

Reynolds is bothered by chips in his elbow, also a painful condition. Allie hesitates about an operation. At 33, you can understand his reluctance.

Lopat, going on 34, has had recurring shoulder trouble. It became so painful during his barnstorming trip to the Pacific that he left the tour and flew home from Japan.

WEEK'S RESULTS ENCOURAGING

Grass Hockey Mars Oak Bay Scoreboard

By HERB EVANS
After winning the Beatty swimming trophy a week ago Friday at the Crystal Gardens, Oak Bay High School culminated one of the best weeks of the year, only one defeat marring the sports calendar.

Early in the week three rugby teams came home with the top honors, all winning shutouts over their opponents. The bantams defeated Victoria High School 6-0, while the juniors boasted a 12-0 victory over Esquimalt High. At University School the senior team edged the Richmond Road squad, 3-0.

The unbeaten junior rugby team held its head up high later in the week by defeating Victoria High with the top-heavy score of 14-0.

The only setback of the week fell upon the Oak Bay Whites in a grass hockey match against Mt. Douglas. The suburbanites took the game, 4-1. Whites visited Esquimalt High and played to a 1-1 draw.

BASKETBALL
In basketball the senior boys made up for its previous defeat at the hands of Mt. View by edging Esquimalt High, 30-28. The senior girls basketball team held its first practise this week in preparation for the Interhigh League which starts in about a month.

The Greens grass hockey team held workouts during the week for today's game against Magee High School at Vancouver.

The senior rugby team has an exhibition game lined up next week against Shawnigan Lake School at Windsor Park.

Hoop League Proves Law Of Diminishing Returns

By DENNY BOYD

Now, everyone knows the Parliament Buildings stand at the mouth of the Inner Harbor. But to find a person who knows where the Intercity Basketball League stands is like finding a kind word in the Kremlin.

Basically speaking, the Intercity League was to be an international loop comprising amateur teams of senior "A" quality. Since it was first proposed a moon or so ago, the league has been composed of six, four, five and at present four teams. Before this week end passes, the league may be down to three or possibly two clubs.

To take these figures chronologically: When the league was first proposed, Victoria, Alberni, Vancouver (two teams), Bellingham and Mount Vernon applied for entry. Things, at this time, looked peachy, just like the basket Doc Nysmith used, which started the sport, also many moons ago. All that was needed to get the loop rolling was for the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association to re-instate Norm Baker and Victoria would have a team and the league would have Canada's greatest basketball player as a guarantee of packed houses.

FIRST SIGNS
But disquieting tremors began to be felt on the American side of the hoop hexagon. Mount Vernon, slowly at first, but later quickly, slid away from the league. Bellingham followed suit, leaving the league with an all-Canadian four-team circuit.

After a letter was sent to the C.A.B.A. requesting the body to expedite judgment on Baker, Bellingham returned for another short stay.

Bellingham's coach, the celebrated Gail Bishop, gave as the reason for the on-again-off-again shenanigans, the feeling that Baker would be reinstated. He asserted that with "the Swede" (Baker) in action, people would come from miles around.

And so, the league was back to five teams.

BISHOP MAKES MISTAKE
Bishop then said, in the presence of Vancouver reporters, that it would cost him $25 per game to get certain players. His statement was printed and read by C.A.B.A. officials.

This time Bellingham was not given a chance to withdraw, they were ousted for what the C.A.B.A. termed "a professional team," thus jeopardizing the circuit's amateur status.

Then there were four. And by six o'clock tonight there may be three.

Victoria's individuals have until that hour to decide which road they will take.

MUST DECIDE TODAY

They must advise the league if they are going to remain in the Intercity League and, if so, whether they want the local loop to handle the correspondence entailed. Carson stated this morning that if he does not get the word, he will inform the I.C.B.L. that Victoria is dropping out. In that case, they have the chance to become a member of the Victoria Senior "B" League. On Thursday, Carson told the Viduals that the association would not sponsor them in the I.C.B.L., but would if they wished, handle their business for them.

Baker, Viduals coach, feels that several top-notch players are avoiding the team because of league supervision.

Manager Sid Watson is of the opinion the team would be more secure financially by dropping the Intercity League and playing exhibition games. Baker holds the same view.

"The Intercity League is a year ahead of itself," says Watson. "I feel that the 500 or so avid hoop fans in Victoria are the ones who must be catered to."

WHERE TO NOW?
Alberni still has a fine team. Vancouver, in spite of several injuries and player switches, has two fine teams.

If Victoria drops out, there is a good chance that Alberni may follow suit.

That would leave two teams. And where would Vancouver be with two teams? (Why, in Vancouver, of course.)

And where would the Intercity League be? Why, that's easy, too. Right back where it was two months ago.

Short season, wasn't it?

Maulstead Gives College Cage Club Needed Lift

By GEOFFREY CONWAY

The Victoria College basketball scene has at last brightened. After three straight setbacks the Vikings have won two exhibition games, the last one a 36-24 victory over the intermediate A leaders, Dickenson & Dunn.

The sudden upswing is partly due to the addition to the team of Wes Maulstead, former Alberni player. However, his services may soon be lost if Victoria individuals decide to include him on their roster.

Tonight Veterans of France will be the opposition as College again tries for its first win in the Senior B league.

A car parade was initiated this afternoon to try to increase the attendance at the Victoria Rugby Union games.

The College also won its first soccer game Friday, downing Normal School 3-0.

Al Cliff netted the only goal in the first half and Hugh McLean tallied in the second. The third goal came when a Normal School fullback miskicked.

Tomorrow the College team faces Heaneys in a scheduled junior division game.

CROSS-COUNTRY

The cross-country team gave notice of things to come Thursday when Bob Elliott placed second in competition with Royal Roads, Victoria High, and Oak Bay High. The Cadets won the event but as the entire College squad wasn't entered it isn't a true indication of what might occur in the annual four-mile Royal Roads race.

The girls' basketball team will play their first game against Normal School at Vic High gym on Thursday.

Norfolk House will be the opposition in the grass hockey team's first contest Nov. 10. This will be a warm-up for the Bridgeman Cup series, which opens Nov. 24.

An indication of the College feeling toward its many losses on the sports field was given in the "Martlet," the school publication, when it printed the following chronology:

First soccer game—we lost.
Rugby opener—we lost.
Soccer vs. Heaneys—lost here, too.
Frosh dance—Frosh lost.

'Y' Photos Turn Back Pages Of Sport History

By BILL HOLLAND

Here's a chance for all you old-timers to relive again the "Golden Age of Sport."

Archie McKinnon, Y.M.C.A. athletic director, has posted on the "Y" bulletin board, pictures of city athletes dating back to 1905.

There are pictures pertaining to basketball, hockey, soccer, baseball, badminton, tumbling and the Y.M.C.A. leader corps.

There is a picture of an athlete on the board that Archie doesn't know, and he says that the oldest one is of the "Y" soccer team taken about 1905. One picture, date 1907, shows the basketball champions of Victoria. Bob White, still active in city cage circles, was on that club.

There is also a group picture of the "Y" championship hockey team of 1912. Walter Small, a well-known hockey figure throughout Canada, played on the team.

There are pictures of gym classes for men and women and the ladies' tumbling group. Shown also is the Y.M.C.A. championship track and field team composed of such notaries as Hugh Reston, police chief of Oak Bay; Torchy Peden of bicycle racing fame, and Ernie Peden.

Later the pictures will be displayed in a downtown store window in conjunction with the "Y's" Centennial year.

Two Young Prairie Artists Please Critical Audience

Two young men from Saskatchewan gave a joint violin-piano recital before a critical audience in the new Arts Centre, 1040 Moss, on Friday night.

Boyd McDonald and Jack Griffin, both in their late-teens, were featured in the latest Young Artists Series concert of the Canadian Federation of Music Teachers' Association. Under the plan, they will tour all western Canada, playing in principal cities and towns from the coast to Winnipeg.

Jack Griffin, who is a cousin of a well-known Victoria musician—Beatrice (Griffin) Lasenby—is an 18-year-old Regina violinist of exceptional promise.

In his performance last night, he showed every evidence of being deeply musical. He has emotional insight, taste and sensitivity. He also has a considerable technical development, though it is not quite up to the standard required for a really adequate performance of the Max Bruch G minor concerto.

The pianist, Boyd McDonald of Saskatoon, played Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy, Saint-Saens. His musicianship is unquestionable and he has a good deal of style. He plays close attention to his performance but does not, as yet, give sufficiently free rein to his imagination.

This resulted in some stilted effects in the Beethoven Sonata in F sharp, Op. 78. Also he needs to develop more expressively the pianissimo end of his dynamic range. His technical facility is very advanced and showed off brilliantly in the Saint-Saens Etude.

The concert was sponsored locally by the British Columbia Music Teachers' Association, Victoria branch.

MRS. JOHN LAWRENCE

NEW VICTORIANS

By GWEN CASH

A woman who wrote a novel while she was in Russia, asked an old man to take it to England, then completely forgot about it until she read a review of it in the London Sphere after she had come to Canada, now lives in Victoria.

The name of the book was "Half a Gypsy." That of its author was then Elsie Fry. It's now Elsie Fry Lawrence. Her husband, John Lawrence, recently retired from the C.N.R.

Gwen Cash—Born in the Shetlands, after returning from the first World War, he was stationed for many years at Edson, near Edmonton. Mrs. Lawrence's father was a Congregationalist minister at Norwich, East Anglia.

After a trip to Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence came to Victoria and bought an attractive house with an enormous garden at 850 Tulp. The garden was planted by a professional botanist and landscape artist. As neither of them knew much about gardens, Mrs. Lawrence says they are finding its demands overwhelming.

Since her initial success, Elsie Fry Lawrence has published two books of poems, sold short fiction to most Canadian publications, besides having seven children and living a full and busy small-town life with all its community demands.

The Victoria Gilbert and Sullivan Society is now planning to enter the field of opera and will perform Victor Herbert's "Red Mill" next spring, it was announced today by officers of the society.

New name for the society will be the Victoria Gilbert and Sullivan Operatic Society. Spokesmen said the society will perform "H.M.S. Pinafore" late this month and intends to do a Gilbert and Sullivan opera each year.

With Cecil Maiden

KON-TIKI

Dominion: At 1.05, 3.16, 5.32, 7.45, 9.55

Actual castoff Thor Heyerdahl and his five adventurers.

Here is truth being stranger than fiction. Whether you're one of the thousands who came under the restless spell of the book or not, you'll find a curious fascination in this film record of the great adventure.

And adventure is indeed the word. For it is much more than the story of six young men who set out across the Pacific on a raft to prove an ethnological theory. It is a red-blooded, salt-whipped yarn with all the tingle that flowed in your veins when the sap was rising and the skyline called.

It is slow in pace—sometimes too "dragged out"—but it gives you the odd and special feeling of being in at the very start of things, even before the fantastic voyage began. And because it is a documentary film made by explorers and not by photographers, there is a "candid camera" quality about it that is strangely satisfying. Added to that roughness there is a charming habit of understatement in the narration, as spoken by Thor Heyerdahl, which lends the film an almost endearing sort of personality. Heyerdahl, incidentally, speaks English with a strong Norwegian flavour, and that, too, adds vigor to the thing.

The record itself follows the adventure faithfully—sometimes with maps and charts, sometimes with "still" pictures held just long enough for an explanation, sometimes with actuality shots. And even before the raft has been so painstakingly built (with those balsa logs that were themselves to remake history) you will realize that the Viking spirit is far from dead in the world.

From the moment of sailing onwards, the six men (and Lolita, a Peruvian parrot, who speaks Spanish with a slightly Norwegian accent) take you with them into a strange world of primordial ocean and the strange creatures, big and little, who live in the vasty deeps of it. There are shots of the little raft, her flags flying bravely over the ocean wastes, rising and dipping dizzily in the ocean furrows. And there is a shot of Heyerdahl with one of his fellows, striding up from a lagoon on to the coral beach of a palm-fringed island that is sheer magic. There is another shot of one of the others (the beards grow so lustily that they make it hard to tell one from the other) singing away at the raft-edge an old Norwegian sea shanty. And there's the first sight of land. And the scenes which you can't see because of the shipwreck, but which are all the easier to imagine because of it. And there are the hula girls. And the planting of a Peruvian coconut on a Polynesian beach. Real South Seas magic at last. And plenty of it!

(But if you're the kind of individual who will like "Kon-Tiki," you may find it hard to sit through the supporting film. Study the "Kon-Tiki" screening times before you set out.)

Playing Vital Part

Part played by naval aviation in the Korean war is being overlooked in Canada. Read-Admiral W. B. Creery told the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club Thursday night.

He said naval aviation is the strong point in Korea. The work of naval vessels was described as "dull" by the Flag Officer of the Pacific Coast, who recently returned from a visit to the war area.

He said the navy was bombarding shore targets with little or no opposition.

These Pictures Won Victorians Prizes In The Times Royal Visit Amateur Photography Contest

With such a subject, it was not too hard to win a prize. James Peirson, 3249 Doncaster Drive, is the author. He wins second prize of $10. He snapped the Princess leaving the Veterans' Hospital, caught her sweet smile, her grace and daintiness.

Third prize went to L. A. Patterson, 303 Vancouver Street. Others just missed prizes: H. Deacon, J. G. Sadler, Karl H. Ogilvie, W. J. Bassett and Lloyd Davies.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES

The mammoth task of running a booming province like British Columbia is now being done from 30 capital city buildings.

The new provincial government telephone directory, distributed today, includes a map of the sprawling James Bay layout.

All the buildings are bounded by Menzies, Belleville, Douglas and Michigan Streets. Many are old homes converted into offices. There are also many government offices up town.

The government's new 700-line, $130,000 automatic exchange starts operating Monday. Most of the existing "locals" have had their numbers changed, necessitating issuing a new directory.

The planned meeting between representatives of local drama groups with Richard Macdonald, secretary of the Dominion Drama Festival, scheduled this evening at the Community Drama Centre, has been canceled. H. S. Hurn announced today.

Dr. Ira Dilworth, a former principal of Victoria High School, has been appointed director of program production for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Dr. Dilworth, was director-general of the CBC's international service, with headquarters at Montreal, before his appointment to his new post.

The sight of Vancouver Island will look extra good to crew members of the weather ship Stenstrom when they reach here Sunday morning.

Six weeks' duty at lonely Station Peter is enough to make any seaman look forward to shore leave, but during October the job of the Stenstrom crew was extra frustrating because of rough weather.

Winds of gale force buffeted the ship and blew her off station frequently.

A gale was reported blowing in the Pacific still, giving the second weather ship, St. Catherine, a rough ride.

United Church Young People of Vancouver Island are holding their annual fall rally at the Metropolitan Church today and Sunday.

Senior Scout Sid Bell, who represented Victoria and district at an International Boy Scout Jamboree in Austria last August, would like to visit Europe again. He told the Victoria Lions Club Friday that the Jamboree was "terrific."

The winter weather factory out in the North Pacific appears to be about ready to go into full production. Rain totaling 38 inches from midnight Friday to 9.30 this morning gave Victoria a sample of what's in store.

Right behind the storm that brought it is a series of storms heading this way, the weatherman reports.

His week-end forecast is "cloudy, with showers."

Mrs. Alice Hobbs, aged about 65, collapsed and died this morning while shopping on Douglas Street.

City police were called to attend Mrs. Hobbs at 10.40 at the General Warehouse Store. They conveyed her to hospital in the police ambulance where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Mrs. Hobbs is survived by her husband, David S. Hobbs, 1146 Leonard Street.

Police patiently untangled a traffic jam at Humboldt Street at noon today, where desperate patrons of the government liquor store hooted and honked and bashed fenders both getting to the store and getting away.

"It's been like this ever since the summer," one of the store staff said philosophically. "At noon you have members of the club next door and hotel guests parking their cars on the street. People wanting liquor have to double park. Then the fun starts."

ATTACKS 'OFFICIALESE'

Ottawa Language Foreign To Protesting Ratepayer

Special To The Times
DUNCAN—George E. Bonner of Cobble Hill has no patience with a language spoken in Eastern Canada—"Ottawa official-ese"—and has made his opinion known quite definitely.

On Oct. 27, as president of Vancouver Island Ratepayers' Association, he sent telegrams to Prime Minister St. Laurent and Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier that Vancouver Island be excluded from a proposal by the transport department to increase telegraph rates.

In his answer, the transport minister stated the appeal was rejected because it "was not couched in the proper form."

Bonner, who can be recognized as a Briton from a fair distance, has nevertheless considerable pride in the country he chose as his home many years ago. "Our telegram of appeal was made in the language of John Canuck," he wired to the minister, "and we feel that it should receive attention just as readily phrased in the language of the common people of this country as if couched in any other form."

New Chemical In Water May Save City's Teeth

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A campaign may soon be started in Victoria to inject another chemical into Victoria's chlorinated water supply.

This chemical, sodium fluoride, has "teeth" in it, and unlike chlorine, which supposedly kills harmful bacteria, is known as the most effective mouthwash for

"mollars" discovered in the world today.

The proposal for a campaign for fluoridation follows a resolution passed recently by the American Dental Association, approving the artificial fluoridation of public water supplies.

Victoria dentists said the rapidly accumulating body of data on experiments with sodium fluoride indicated that the chemical prevented teeth decay.

NO WORK WORRY

Victoria dentists were not concerned with the possibility of the loss of business. They said they had more work than they can handle at present and that fluoridation was only an answer to one dental problem.

Dr. F. McComb, provincial director division of preventive dentistry, said so far experiments with fluoridation showed that the chemical reduced dental decay by 60 per cent in a specific age group among younger children.

"That is nothing to sneeze at," he said.

Dr. R. H. McDougall, president of the Victoria Dental Society, said that as soon as experiments on fluoridation were complete, a campaign would be launched to have the chemical injected into public waters.

"We all agree that fluoridation does no harm," he said. "But we have to find out yet how effective it is as a health measure."

Men Rush In Where Women Once Dominant

Women have been accused of moving into men's field of activities, but retaliation has set in.

The male members of the Sir James Douglas School P.T.A., holding their second annual country fair Friday night at the school, met with increased success in a venture traditionally run by women.

With 1,200 people crowding into the school, buying all the usual items including home-made jams and jellies, as well as children's used clothing, it appears that last year's profit of $350 will be exceeded.

L. H. Noble, convenor of the fair, described the rush to buy the displayed items as "a land office business."

Roll Out Empty Barrels! Last Taverns See Bottom

Sidney's New Hotel Soon To Be All Alone Serving The Thirsty As Strike Continues

Island Highway taverns expect to be dry after tonight. The 11-day-old strike by brewery workers, which has closed licensed premises one by one, is expected to force Six-Mile House and Colwood Inn to put out "closed" signs Monday.

Tudor and Half Way parlors in Esquimalt closed earlier this week. Gorge Hotel operated this afternoon but was going to shut down at 6.30 tonight.

Nanaimo's 14 pubs have been closing during the course of the week, leaving only three in business today. These, too, were expected to close after tonight.

Memorial Service For Coast Veteran

PORT ALBERNI—A memorial service for Capt. Reece Riley, Port Alberni harbormaster and veteran skipper on Vancouver Island's west coast, will be held at the Legion Hall Sunday at 3 p.m.

The service will mark and end to a tragedy that prompted months of searching for some clue to the accident which took the life of the most experienced small boat navigator in the Alberni area.

Capt. Riley disappeared during a storm on Oct. 24, 1950, while on a trip to the north end of the island from Port Alberni. Wreckage of his speedboat, the Maureen R, was picked up later on Flores Island, but his body was never recovered.

MINISTER LEARNS FIRST HAND HOW NORTHERNERS LIKE ROADS

This little gem has drifted all the way down from Prince George.

A car pulled up to a garage in the northern city, and a good-looking middle-aged man got out and ordered a full tank of gas. This done, the driver followed the attendant into the office while the sales slip was made out.

"How are the roads south of here?" asked the customer. This, it appears, was a touchy subject with the attendant.

"They are the foulest roads I've ever seen. They're awful. I'd like to get hold of that (censored) minister of public works and show him the lousy roads we have to drive on," raved the garage man.

The easy-going stranger took all this in. He then handed his credit card to the attendant.

Plainly printed on it was "E. C. Carson, Minister of Public Works."

Civic Contest Field Swells

Ald. Skillings Announces His Candidacy But Many Key Figures Still Undecided

The electoral field is fast filling with candidates as Dec. 13 election date draws nearer.

Latest on the Victoria-aldermanic scene to announce he will stand for re-election is Ald. Waldo Skillings, chairman of City Council's transportation committee.

Veteran School Trustee Walter P. Jeune is the first of the school board incumbents to announce he will seek re-election.

In Esquimalt, Councillor A. C. Wurtele stated he would run for reeve.

On the mayoral scene, reports of heavy pressure on Ald. Millard Mooney and ex-alderman Archie Willis to run for mayor, continue, but neither is ready to make a statement. Should they decide to run, it would increase the mayoral field to five.

In addition to a mayor, Victoria electors must select seven aldermen, four school trustees and one police commissioner.

Ald. Skillings, who in addition to chairmanship of transportation, heads the amalgamation research committee and holds membership on finance, said:

"In announcing my candidacy for alderman on Victoria City Council for 1952-53, I do so with the hope that I can continue in my endeavor to establish a long-range program for improvement and expansion of Victoria."

"I have enjoyed my four years on the council and have tried at all times to serve, to the best of my ability, the interests of the citizens at large."

WANTS FINAL TERM

School Trustee Jeune who has served for 13 years on the school board said he wanted to bring the record to 15 years before retiring.

He was for nine years on Saanich School Board, and chairman the last year. He is now completing his fourth year on the Greater Victoria board.

As chairman of building and grounds committee for the past four years he has had much to do with the carrying out of the major school building program. "I would like to see the completion of the program," said Mr. Jeune in announcing his candidacy.

STILL UNDECIDED

Deferring decision until a later date are school board chairman Maj. R. H. Green, Trustee J. G. de Bourcier and Trustee

WALDO SKILLINGS

Arnold W. Trevett, whose terms expire this December.

"I am giving it consideration," was the word from Kenneth Leeming, who withdrew candidacy for the school board last year, shortly before election, because of property qualifications difficulties.

Maj. Green has served 10 years on the school board; de Bourcier, five and Trevett, six.

Cmdr. Wurtele, who will seek the Esquimalt reeveship, has been a councillor since 1945 and is now chairman of the inter-municipal committee.

Reeve A. I. Thomas has not yet indicated whether he will stand for re-election.

First non-councillor to announce himself a candidate for Esquimalt council is Paul Fee-terau, 530 Lamson Street, a retired naval officer.

Peggy Sinclair And Gerry Sylvester Married In Metropolitan United Church

Traditional ivory satin was worn by last evening's bride, Margaret Irene (Peggy) Sinclair, when she repeated vows with United Church for nuptials of the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sinclair, 1579 Hillside Avenue and the son of Mrs. J. W. Parker, 225 Maddock Street, and Mr. J. M. Sylvester, Edmonton.

A panel of lace down the front enriched the satin wedding gown, the skirt of which extended into a long train. Bodice was styled with a butterfly lace collar and slim sleeves edged with lace from elbow to wrist. Falling to the waist in graceful folds from a dainty Dutch cap of satin trimmed with lily of the valley was the net veil.

The attractive dark-haired bride carried red roses and white carnations and wore a ruby pendant set in a heart, a gift from the groom.

Pink net over taffeta with brocade taffeta jacket was choice of Miss Lois Nairne, maid of honor, Miss Pat Sinclair in blue taffeta, fashioned with stand-up collar and net overskirt, was her sister's bridesmaid.

Both attendants wore elbow-length veils attached to coronets and carried pink carnations and mauve bebe chrysanthemums. Cameo pendant earrings, gifts of the bride, completed the effect.

Best man was Jimmy Swindell, Dick Willoughby and Reg Lewis ushered.

Lougheed's Banquet Hall was scene of the reception, where a three-tier wedding cake centred the bride's table. Bert Barker gave the toast.

For travelling, Mrs. Sylvester donned a gabardine suit in metal gray with gray accessories. Her hat was of deep pink feathers.

The newlyweds will live at 225 Maddock Street when they return from a honeymoon to Seattle.

Directs Recreation Cancer Clinic

TORONTO, Nov. 3 (CP)—Morale boosting is the specialty of Marietta Vincent, recreational director at the Cancer Memorial Hospital, New York City.

Mrs. Vincent came to Toronto for the Canadian Cancer Society conference. She told delegates about the recreational therapy centre which she established at the hospital four years ago.

"Cancer patients feel defeated and that they've been knocked out of the picture," she said. "Giving them handicraft or something useful to do makes them think they can still pull their weight in the world."

Mrs. Vincent has four full-time staff members at her centre, and 40 volunteers.

"Rehabilitation is something new in cancer work," she said. "We help patients adjust themselves back into normal living and to become accustomed to artificial body aids."

Mrs. Vincent likes her work so much that a couple of months ago she literally married into it. Her husband is one of the volunteer workers on her staff.

"He was a stranger in town and wanted to do some good work," she said. "So he went to the Cancer Volunteer Society and they sent him to me."

Congratulatory words spoken by Mrs. Wallis were printed by Mr. Earl Clark, former Victoria High School teacher, and presented to the honor guest with the gift and corsage.

History . . . Past and Present At 'Lan Dderwen'

This week at "Lan Dderwen," historic home of Victoria's pioneer Spencer family, an era filled with gracious memories bows out and a transition from guarded privacy to public domain begins.

Miss Sara Spencer, who on behalf of the Spencer Foundation, gave the Moss Street home to the city as an art gallery, is moving this week to an attractive new home on Cadboro Bay Road.

And, as each stately room in "Lan Dderwen" becomes vacant, members of the Art Centre of Greater Victoria commence work that will quickly make the bright promise of a gracious future for the fine old home a reality.

Original owner of "Lan Dderwen" was banker A. A. Green, father of Dr. F. W. Green, ex-M.L.A. for Cranbrook. When Cary Castle burned down at the turn of the century, the mansion was rented to the government—for $50 a month—as a residence for Lieutenant-Governor Thomas McInnis.

Lieutenant-Governor Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere followed Thomas McInnis and during his regime "Lan Dderwen" was setting for a dinner given by the Lieutenant-Governor and his lady for the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, later to become King George V and Queen Mary.

Besides Queen Mother Mary, the only guest at that dinner still living is Mrs. E. G. Prior of Victoria.

Robert Beaven, Premier of B.C. and one of Victoria's mayors, later bought the house and sold it to David Spencer, who allowed it to remain under parliamentary control until 1904.

In that year, the present Government House was completed and "Lan Dderwen" was freed to become David Spencer's family home and to carry on the hospitable tradition for which it is justly famed today.

Left to right, Mrs. T. T. Carpenter, Mr. Carpenter, gallery caretaker Gus Stocks, Mrs. Adrian Law, Mrs. Unity Baile and Mrs. G. C. Orpen. They are members of a group that is sewing and hanging curtains as a background for paintings to be exhibited.

Volunteers Create New Setting

Many hands make light work is an old adage that holds true at Victoria's new art gallery on Moss Street, where executive members of the board work with a corps of volunteers to have the building ready for exhibitions as soon as possible.

The curator, Colin Graham, has planned two main galleries in the spacious downstairs drawing rooms, connected by a wide-arched doorway.

Many tall windows, reaching almost from floor to ceiling give a splendid light. The walls are light cream and ready now for pictures to be hung.

A third gallery is being arranged in the oak-paneled hallway where light beige curtains will be placed as a background for pictures and a lighting system installed under the stair wells to ensure a proper setting for paintings.

Classrooms for children and young people will be opened in one of the main galleries downstairs and in a large room upstairs. Office and board room has been placed off the main hallway.

A main gallery on the ground floor will also be used as a room for musicales and cultural lectures.

Mrs. A. S. Wyllie, as president of the board of the Art Centre of Greater Victoria, is head of the general committee on arrangements.

Here, Mr. Whitehead presents Mrs. Wyllie with a cheque for $1,000 from Mrs. K. E. Maltwood, who expressed the hope Victorians will "rally enthusiastically" to support the gallery.

Art gallery curator Colin Graham shows a large reception room marked for young people's art classes to budding artists Peggy Tuttle, Ann Kipling and Diana Stavrov. The room will also be a display gallery.

First musicale in the still-empty gallery was held yesterday evening, under auspices of Victoria Music Teachers' Association. Plans for the gathering were made by association president, Miss Una Calvert, centre; Miss Marjorie Tebo and Dr. Harry Hickman, vice-president of the art gallery and chairman of the program committee. The grand piano, only moved into the gallery on Friday afternoon, is the gift of Mrs. H. R. Beaven.

Discussion of proper setting and light for a copy in the permanent collection of the new gallery is held by Mrs. J. D. Hunter, left, member of the advisory board; Mrs. Ina Unthoff, centre, member of exhibition committee.

and Mrs. Seely-Smith, head of the house committee. Fireplaces framed in fine old Walter Scott tiles add charm to the high-ceilinged rooms.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Nature's Corset May Need Some Renewed Elastic

All women know that a bulging stomach spoils the figure but many of them fail to realize that this is a real health hazard. Nature provided us with a strong natural girdle of muscles but the pull of gravity and our own lazy habits in posture and lack of exercise weakens nature's corset.

When this happens it allows our internal organs to drop. The intestines and the stomach droop out of place with consequent pull and internal strain generally. Many backaches and much fatigue and constipation result from this.

Therefore, as real preventive or corrective medicine as well as a beauty measure, I often give you exercises which stretch fatty deposits off and strengthen the abdominal wall. Some of these exercises are rather strenuous so let us begin with a simple but effective one.

Lie on the floor on your back with your legs straight and your arms resting on the floor. Bend the left knee up close to your abdomen. Return to the floor. Bend your right knee close to your abdomen. Return to the floor. Bend your left knee close to your abdomen. Continue, bending alternate legs and returning to floor.

From this let us gradually increase the difficulty of the exercise. This time bend your left knee to your abdomen and then straighten the leg, toward the ceiling. Lower left leg. Keep the knee stiff. Do the same thing with the right leg and continue, alternating.

Another variation. Bend the left knee to the abdomen. As you straighten the left leg bend the right. Continue, without touching the floor but bring the heels close to the floor. Later on you can raise the left leg, and as the right leg moves up the left moves down. Do not touch the floor and keep both knees straight throughout the exercise. If you would like to have my abdominal reducing exercises send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 2 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Use Quantity Chart For Party Plans Know How Much Coffee For A Crowd

Parties can be fun, if there's no headaches over the "quantity" problem. In other words, just how much coffee is needed for the church wienie roast? Or how much cocoa should be prepared for little Susie's birthday party? The answer is a "quantity" chart.

Cocoa to serve 100: One pound cocoa; five cups sugar; two teaspoons salt; two cups cold water; six quarts boiling water; 13 quarts hot milk. Mix cocoa, sugar, salt. Add cold water and one quart boiling water. Cook 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Add remainder of hot milk and water.

Coffee to serve 100: One and three-quarter pounds coffee; two eggs; one teaspoon salt; five gallons boiling water. Beat egg and add crushed shell and salt with one-half cup of cold water. Boil gently for 15 or 20 minutes and then remove bag of coffee and shells.

Tea to serve 100: One pound tea; five gallons boiling water; tie tea loosely in a double thickness of cheese-cloth. Cover tightly and set aside, for five to eight minutes, in a place where it won't boil. Remove the bag before serving.

SANDWICH HINT

One large sandwich loaf (three pounds) cuts 60 to 70 slices. One small sandwich loaf cut 20 slices. One large loaf requires half a pound of butter and three-quarters to one pound of spread filling.

One quart of either bulk or brick ice cream will serve 10 to 12 persons.

PIES ALWAYS HELP

Pies make tasty desserts at any time. Here's a recipe for pumpkin-pie filling calculated to bring all kinds of compliments from the head of the house.

Ingredients: One pint pumpkin; pint milk; two eggs beaten. Mix one teaspoon cinnamon; one-half teaspoon cloves; one teaspoon ginger; pinch salt; one cup sugar. Add dry ingredients to liquids and pour into uncooked pie shell. Bake.

Butterscotch-pie also is attractive, particularly to anyone with a sweet tooth for desserts.

Ingredients: One tablespoon melted butter; two tablespoons flour; two egg yolks; one cup milk; one cup brown sugar. Melt butter and mix in flour. Add well-beaten egg yolks, milk and sugar and boil in a double-boiler until it thickens. Bake shell and

Did you know "variety meats" such as heart, liver, kidney, tongue, brains and sweetbread are just as healthful as the better known cuts of meat? Health department officials also say they provide all the proteins, minerals and vitamins of the more expensive meats. They also can be made into tasty dishes.

A 60th Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Jeune, Cordova Bay Road, will be at home to friends on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 10, from 2:30 to 5, on the occasion of the celebration of their 60th wedding anniversary. A family gathering will be held at the Cordova Bay Road home in the evening.

A courtship that included walking eight miles each time he wished to see his "best girl," a wedding in the home he is living in today, many years of city life, followed by farming on the Mt. Newton Crossroad, are all good memories for P. J. Jeune.

With Mrs. Jeune he will celebrate 60 years of wedded life next Saturday.

He came to Victoria from Jersey in the Channel Islands as a young man. His wife, the former Agnes Touet, came with her parents to Cordova Bay, when she was 11 years old, from the United States.

"We were the first settlers at the bay," she tells you, and Mr. Jeune chimes in to say, "Yes, and when I started courting, I walked from Victoria to see her, out to Cedar Hill, then over a trail to the bay."

They were married at the Touet farm on Nov. 7, 1891, and came to Victoria, where they lived for 30 years before going out to Saanich to take up farming.

A few years ago they retired and came with a son and daughter to live on the old Touet farm at Cordova Bay where they were married.

There are six children: Arthur Jeune, Cordova Bay; Mrs. H. Clarke (Lily), Victoria; Mrs. Greg Purser (Laurel), Portland; Mrs. George Malcolm (Alma), Comox; Miss Edith Jeune, Saanich, and Miss Eva Jeune, Cordova Bay. Also six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

BEDTIME STORY

by Thornton W. Burgess

Jack Frost had been busy in the Green Forest. He had been opening beehives and rough brother North Wind had shaken many of the sweet little three-cornered nuts to the ground. It was a good year for beehives. There were more of the delicious little nuts than the little people of the Green Forest had ever seen at one time.

Everybody—with a liking for those sweet little nuts was on hand each day. Great big Buster Bear was there. So was Mother Bear. So were the cubs, Lightfoot and the Deer and Mrs. Lightfoot and the fawns were there. Thunderer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse were there. Of course, the Squirrel cousins were there, Happy Jack of the grey coat, Chatterer of the red coat, Striped Chipmunk of the striped coat, and Rusty the Fox Squirrel, Bobby Coon and One, Billy Possum were on hand. They were not as fond of the nuts as of some other things, but they liked a change. Of course, Blacky the Crow was there, and you may be sure Sammy Jay was there. Yank Yank the Nuthatch and Tommy Tit the Chickadee were on hand. There were others, some of them just to look on. One of these was Peter Rabbit. Another was Reddy Fox. Reddy ate a few of the nuts, but like Redtail the Hawk who also was there, he hoped to be able to get himself a different kind of dinner, a Rabbit dinner or a Squirrel dinner for instance.

Great big Buster Bear shuffled about and raked over the leaves under which the little nuts were hiding, and said, "Woof, woof," now and then. Sometimes he growled a warning to others not to come too near. It was the same way with Mother Bear—She and the Cubs kept a respectful distance from Buster Bear as did everybody else. But there was no quarrelling.

The liveliest ones at the daily picnic, and the ones who had the most fun were Buster Bear's cubs. They scrambled up the trees and scrambled down again. It was a happy time, this picnic time over in the Green Forest. Yes, sir, it was a happy time while it lasted. For plenty to eat for everybody means peace. Not until there is plenty for all the people of the Great World will there be peace over all the Great World.

To Divert Grain
WINNIPEG, Nov. 3 (CP)—The Canadian Wheat Board Friday asked elevator companies to divert to Vancouver some of Saskatchewan's top grade, dry wheat which normally goes to the Lakehead.

The board said the purpose of the switch is to get as much dry grain as possible to Vancouver because of the high percentage of tough grain now moving to that port from Alberta stations which will require drying.

The board requested elevator companies at 126 Saskatchewan points to ship all wheat which is expected to grade dry 1, 2, 3 or 4 northern to Vancouver. Wheat which is expected to grade tough or damp of these grades will continue to go to Fort William.

Air Cadets Train In Citizenship

By ROY THORSEN

Building citizens is the aim of the Air Cadet League of Canada, which is now celebrating its 10th anniversary.

Flight Officer Walter Eaton, in command of the local 89 Squadron of the Cadet League, tells me: "Air cadet training is primarily a course in citizenship—and they are not encouraged to choose a military career."

The local squadron, sponsored by the Kinsmen Club of this city, trains Tuesday and Friday nights at the Macaulay Point H.Q.

"We've got 108 youngsters, aged between 14 and 18, on strength, and we can still handle a few more," F.O. Eaton said.

MANY GO "ACTIVE"

In spite of the fact no encouragement is given air cadets to carry on after their training to join the armed services, Flying Officer Gordon Bolley, adjutant of the Victoria unit, says that many of the boys trained by the squadron have gone "active" in the R.C.A.F.

Defence Minister Brooke Claxton has this to say about the air cadets:

"Today the work of the Air Cadet League of Canada assumes added importance. It was not by chance that the recent increase in the size of the R.C.A.F. was matched by my authorizing a corresponding increase in the size of the Royal Canadian Air Cadets . . . because Canada needs alert young men, men who are soberly cognizant of their responsibilities as Canadian citizens—and the R.C.A.F. needs many such qualified young men."

The local squadron, like other units across the Dominion, relies chiefly on air force veterans on "Civvy Street" to train the youths. They all receive pay on the basis of reservists of the armed forces.

POINTS OF TRAINING

A few points on the air cadet training:
Outstanding graduate cadets can qualify for commissions in the R.C.A.F. . . . Funds to support the cadet units must be raised from public subscription . . . awards are annual scholarships under which cadets can attend Joint Services College at Royal Roads and the Royal Military Academy at Kingston, Ont. . . . There is no pay for the air cadet, but they receive valuable education, trips and other benefits.

Air cadets can study navigation, meteorology, aero engine, radio, photography and many other subjects designed to assist them in preparing for future careers. . . . Those who get top marks become eligible for exchange visits to the U.K. and the United States to promote good-will and make new friends for Canada.

Island Telephone System To Be Expanded, Improved

Duncan, Chemainus, and Lake Cowichan telephone exchanges will be expanded and improved within a few months at a cost of $70,000, B.C. Telephone Co. has announced.

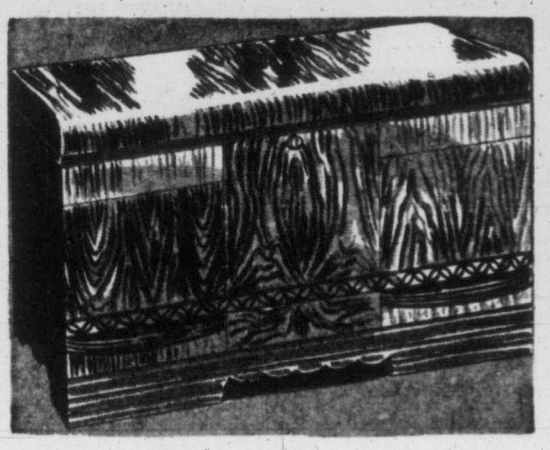

All three will have central office additions, and Duncan and Chemainus will have outside plant additions completed by May.

Work is now under way on a $12,000 extension to the Duncan exchange building, where outside work involves placing cable containing 5,000,000 feet of wire, and stringing 166 miles of open wire.

Concerned About Brains

Mountain Climber Dick Praul, Times staff writer, who has wandered the world seeking challenges to his alpinist's skill, is writing a series on his experiences. He tells of climbing Mount Snowden in the first article which appears next week.

where other amateur climbers had fallen over the side.

There was room for only one to travel at a time and he met a cheerful, carefree young Weichman coming in the opposite direction. Unfortunately we couldn't cut it off there and least readers in suspense as to what happened as Paul is a man-about-town whom so many Victorians know, so it's obvious he solved the problem without fatal results.

Traveling Editor Richard Schofield bluntly says in his next week's article "there's a lot of junk written about royalty" but he hasn't turned sour as that might indicate.

"As a matter of fact he thinks the book on the Princesses written by their former governess is a masterpiece about two lovable girls.

Some of the other stories, he thinks, are by writers who slant them in hopes of receiving favors or decorations.

Among other articles next week: Jacoby gives the second of his series of three on Samba; there's advice on what should be done in the garden right now; Gordon Forbes tells about government grubstakes for miners and a story about Saanlich Constable David Shepherd is aimed to prove that a policeman can have soul.

in his household. He did not become the husband of his maid. He simply performed the marriage ceremony for her and her fiancé. But he is a pretty big gun in the Church, in the House of Lords and in England generally.

London newspapers sent photographers and reporters to cover the wedding of Miss Bridget X. and Mr. F. Q. His Grace the Lord Archbishop of York officiating.

Presses whirled and the papers shot all over the country. The next morning people rubbed their eyes and passed the "Chronicle" over the coffee. "My dear, have you seen this? How very charming of him."

league, or the bursar, or the clerk, or the senate; returns to his room, and glances through the latest issue of a learned review, has a few words with a pupil—and lo, it's lunch time. After lunch in the refectory, followed by a chat about the day's new literature at half-past two, and minutes afterwards hurries to his lecture. He should be past two, and minutes afterwards hurries to his lecture. After tea comes the "y" exercise (unless it comes to be a day when he has no lecture, in which he plays golf in the afternoon), and after dinner he spends a couple of hours with a new book on his special subject (or a book on the circulating library on something else), after which the paper again, a nightcap, and bed at eleven, after a somewhat tiring but thoroughly well-spent day. Certainly the genius professor ought to be celebrated for longevity!"

Sir William Dampier, the noted scientific writer, has written a new "Cambridge and Elsewhere," published by John Murray, is, at hand), was not one of the 80%. He lived a particularly full life, taught at Cambridge and wrote the famous "History of Science," which went through 18 editions in the United States during his own lifetime.

One of the early experiences, as an undergraduate, brought him to the bank manager for an overdraft. All went well. "My experience," he writes, "was probably happier than that of an undergraduate of whom

I was told many years later. At another Cambridge bank he was sent inside to see Mr. Foster, who said: "We don't usually allow undergraduates to overdraft, but we know your father, and should like to do what we can for you. How much do you want?" "Well," said the undergraduate as he thought for a moment, "how much have you got?"

tells the following story: One day on returning home, Rutherford was met by his parlourmaid, who said that a telephone message had come from the London clergy, crossed-innumously. Rutherford puzzled and agonised, and at last elicited: "Oh yes, I remember now: it was from Metropolitan Vickers."

it. Not her husband. Nor the Archbishop. They had nothing to do with the wedding being plastered all over the papers.

Actually, the Archbishop did nothing. That was the irony. It was the same old thing for him, and the same old newspapers didn't consider it unusual. They considered it a sizzling story. "Page one, Eddie. Two pictures, please."

Why? Because they knew that the English people would gloat over pictures of His Grace officiating for his maid. And they were right. The people did gloat over it.

But that happened in nineteen thirty-six. Would it happen today? No, I don't think so. Is that cheap disparity disappearing amongst the English? Yes, as far as I can see, it is.

BY DON INGHAM

has become big business, the advent of the engineer, cost accountant, and "super," a lot of the money by the board. In the abundance, perhaps. In the woods were full of the responsibility of the signaller. The "cat skinner" of the third-hand driver, or the more skilled cat driver, or bulldozer operator, is the "powder monkey," known simply as the powderman. The jockeys are non-existent, but peek at the payroll will show no working as truck drivers. Expressions also change. Very rarely now do you hear a hooker mumbering under his breath for an engineer to "blow the fog to 'em," a heavy pull. ## Based On Experiences In B.C. Wilderness

Reviewed by DICK PRAUL
"Grass Beyond the Mountains," by Richardson F. Hobson, Jr. (d. $4.50). Lippincott Co., 256

The big adventure in the eventful life of 15-year-old Rich, Hobson, Jr., started in 1934, when, in company with a rough-and-ready rancher named Panhandle Phillips, he set sail from a Wyoming beach and headed into the British Columbia wilderness.

They went into the "unknown" which lay beyond the formidable Itcha, Alzak and Fawnie mountain ranges and, joined by a third hard-bitten rider—Tommy Holte—they got through to stake their claim to probably the last great cattle range on the American continent.

It was a band of valiant horses that carried the party through—and Hobson knew it. This book is, therefore, dedicated to his horse friends, "conquerors of the silent, lonely trails." Hobson named Nimpio, the Big George, and Old Scabby White and Fletcher, Old Scabby White and Fletcher, Old Scabby White and Fletcher.

Neither the publisher's representative nor Rich, Hobson tell in their notices whether this is the author's first book or not, but presumably it is. Mr. Hobson is more at home on a bronco than before a typewriter, but that does not mean that the book is not a work of art in its own way.

Hobson married a Vancouver girl seven years ago. His ranch, in a 25-mile-long grassy valley on the headwaters of the Nechako River, is alive with a big bunch of white-face cattle more than paying their way, and a big herd of range horses that are eating up the profits.

But it isn't surprising that the horses stay on. They were the critics that got Hobson, Panhandle Phillips and Tommy Holte over the mountains and into the grass.

Tanya herself is a character you will not forget easily. You cannot help but feel her great loneliness and suffer with her as she returns to Pelican Bay to face a past that is also full of unpleasantness.

With Tanya you will conquer all this, and with her you will have the future in the new land you have discovered in Kristine Benson Kristofferson's first novel.

Holmes Still Holds Detective Spotlight

Publication of what are regarded as the best of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes' stories, presented in handy pocket size by Oxford University Press, with an introduction by S. C. Roberts, conforms with the revival of interest in the great Baker Street detective. Most Sherlock Holmes' fans will agree that no characters in English literature since those in the great Dickens' gallery have taken so firm a hold upon the British and American imagination as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.

The volume, incidentally, contains the story of the return of Sherlock Holmes, the one the author was forced to write as the result of a storm of protest, including some threatening letters, when he had amazed the world by sending his character he had made famous to his literary death at the height of his popularity.

Quite frequently, at the bedtime of Pamela and my baby son Richard, I smooth on a facial cream before joining them in the nursery for good nights. In our family, good-nights mean quite a bit more than a simple kiss. The routine varies.

Sometimes it means rocking the baby a bit (with Pamela close beside me in the chair) before I tuck them into their crib. Sometimes it involves a quiet game with Pamela, or the singing of favorite lullabies.

Whatever we do, I usually find, by light-on time, that enough minutes have elapsed for the facial to have accomplished its good work.

Books And Authors

Publishers, editors, authors and book reviewers of the time when Edward Bulwer Lytton was the literary lion of the day and Dickens, Disraeli, Thackeray and Tennyson had just started to write their way to fame, were apparently a quarrelsome, bickering, back-biting crowd.

It was an era of loud and lusty journalism unhandicapped by any regard for libel when a critic's ability to write stinging invective and infer scandal won him the highest praise.

Literary figures of the 1800's parade through Helen Ashton's "Lettie Landon" (Collins, Toronto). Poetry writer, book reviewer L.E.L., as Letty used for her pen name, innocent victim of the scurrilous tactics of the day, is the central figure in the story.

Through the parties she attends you meet most of the authors who were writing between 1800 to 1860 and the editors of Blackwood's, Fraser's, The Literary Gazette and other magazines.

Bitter criticism and abuse for their enemies, fulsome flattery for their friends, were standard ethics. Bulwer, for instance, on the black list of Fraser's brilliant Irish editor William Maginn, knew his best seller "Last Days of Pompeii" or anything else he ever wrote, would be held up to scorching ridicule by Maginn regardless of merit.

Maginn's life and unhappy marriage were also ripe material for the poison pen of the vindictive but solitary editor.

Tennyson got such a rough ride from the critics when his first material was published, he quit in disgust and didn't try anything more for 10 years.

Anonymous was a thin cloak to cover the sneer campaigners. They used a variety of names on their masterpieces, but on a real viewpoint article were proud to use their real names. It boosted their literary standing.

The book will be a revelation to those who have some of the "musts" of a half century ago still on their library shelves.

Should you have ever criticized the scandal tabloids that emanate from Toronto or Chicago as unworthy products of the present age of journalism you can gather with surprise from author Ashton that London issued at least one in the 1800 which would make those of today look pale and insipid.

Welcome issue of the Reprint Society of Canada will be "Whisky Galore" or "Tight Little Island" of film fame.

Those who haven't read it are inclined to regard it merely as a story of Scottish islanders made do by the lack of the necessities of life. It is a book of gripping interest, filled with characters so finely drawn they become personal friends.

With daughter Pamela like story-book session (below), Miss Allyson has learned such double duty tricks as giving her complexion a freshening facial during good-night lullaby hour with her daughter and baby son (left), and allowing Pamela to "wave-setting" during conversation time (right).

There are numerous other tricks you can work out to prevent your beauty hours from being lost time as your children are concerned. When you exercise, invite your daughter to work out beside you. You may find, as I did, that her young suppleness puts you on your mettle.

Or you might try having your youngster's musical moments correspond with your hand treatment. What with having two parents who fill the air with song on the slightest provocation, Pamela has developed at once.

Recipes

Cheese and eggs, of which we have plenty at budget prices, take the "famine" out of any meat shortage. This recipe for cheese fondue comes from a mouth-watering collection of recipes artistically presented by the Women's Auxiliary of Trinity Chapel, Solebury, Pennsylvania. The bound collection is called "Bucks (the Artists County) Cooks."

Cheese Fondue

Six slices stale bread, 2 eggs, beaten, 1 cup milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, 1 cup grated cheese, 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon paprika.

Cut the bread in one-third inch slices, trim crust and cut bread in finger strips. Arrange in a buttered baking dish. Combine ingredients and pour over the bread. Set in pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven (325 deg. F.) for about 30 minutes or until set. Cottage cheese may be substituted for grated, if desired.

For the fondue, allow a substantial dinner for six. Turn again to Bucks (the Artists County) Cooks.

Six eggs, 1/2 cup butter, 5 tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, 1/2 teaspoon prepared mustard, 1 cup milk, 1/2 cup grated cheese.

Make two cups of white sauce with prepared mustard, 1/2 cup paprika and Beat egg yolks and add three-fourths cup of white sauce. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; fold into yolk sauce. Turn into heavy buttered pan, allow 10 minutes on top of range. Finish in preheated oven (350 deg. F.) for 15 minutes. Add remaining sauce to one cup of peas, sprinkle grated cheese over omelet, then fold in half. Serve topped with rest of sauce and peas, mixing lightly but well.

Macaroni (cheese Italiane)
One tablespoon salt, 3 quarts boiling water, 8 ounces elbow macaroni, 1 1/4 cups evaporated milk, 2 cups grated cheddar cheese, 1 cup diced cooked spaghetti, 1 tablespoon mustard, dash Tabasco, salt, freshly ground pepper.

Add 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water; gradually add macaroni so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Toss with a few drops of oil. Combine ingredients with cooked macaroni. Pour into 1 1/2 quart casserole; cover. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 30 minutes.

Before buying a cooking utensil, check to see whether it tips easily. A too-weighty handle may cause instability of the pan and result in dangerous accidents may result from such a heavy-handed utensil's tendency to spill. Check for balance with the lid on the pan, then remove the cover to see how well it stands alone.

If your blanket bindings are especially dirty, try tackling them with frothy suds and a soft brush before plunging the entire blanket into the laundry water.

To Take Ink Spots Off Wool Material

Ink spots on wool material require different treatment from those on washable fabrics, but they can be removed with careful hand-dressing technique. The Shetland Wool Research Laboratory.

First, rinse with cold water to remove as much ink as possible. If the spot is from washable ink, soak in a cool solution of synthetic detergent and rinse again with clear water. Do not rub the spot, however, since wool fibres are temporarily weakened when wet and are subject to felting.

Ink spots from permanent-type inks may be removed by applying dilute hydrogen peroxide on white or light-colored wool, or lemon juice for colored fabrics. Best results will be obtained by placing the spotted material over a small bowl and dripping the liquid through the ink spot. Use an absorbent towel to soak up excess liquid from the wool and allow to dry without handling.

Refinishing Walls Is Simpler Nowadays

Once people start such ambitious projects as re-doing floors and woodwork, there's no telling where it will stop.

The woodwork will look so nice, for instance, that the ceiling and walls will look shabby by contrast, and you might just as well finish the job right.

These days it's a lot easier than it used to be, what with new kinds of paints and gauges that just about put the handyman around the house in the decorating business. Get the whole room ready for the job before you start putting on anything new.

Tackle the ceiling first. If it was calcimine previously, wash off the old finish with warm water whether you plan to re-calcimine or use paint. If it was painted before and isn't too dirty, use a dust brush to get off all loose particles of paint.

Dust the walls, too, and wash any bad smudges. Then mix up some patching plaster, and fix up all the cracks on the ceiling and walls, covering these with a size after the plaster dries.

Some people paint right over old wallpaper, but we don't go along with the idea, even if it saves work. You'll want to take the old paper off some day, anyway; painting over it makes it much tougher. You can rent a steamer from your hardware man, and as the steam softens the glue, scrape off the paper with a broad-bladed putty knife, being careful not to dig into the plaster.

Previously painted walls need no further preparation before painting.

but if you've removed paper before switching to paint, you'll have to size the whole thing.

One way to save a lot of time and muscle in your home redecoration is to use a roller. They come in a lot of styles—some you dip into the paint in a shallow metal trough that fits on your step-ladder; some hold the paint in a reservoir inside the roller, and others are fed by a portable hand-pump pressure tank.

With a roller, you'll need a brush only for the trim and to touch up

Grow Christmas Flowers From Bulbs In Water

Growing flowers for Christmas in the modern home is not easy, but it can be done if Paper White narcissus bulbs are started early this month and grown in carefully regulated temperatures. Without such care the flowers are likely to be inferior and the stems weak, because the bulbs have not matured to the degree most favorable for "forcing."

"Forcing" is the florist's word for making a plant flower out of season; and the formula for accomplishing this is much the same with all bulbs. Bulbs develop, even in storage, and take time to reach the stage where they are ready to grow. If planted then, they first must produce roots, since top growth without good roots is weak, and seldom flowers.

Paper White narcissi, planted in bowls filled with gravel or peat chips, should be kept in a temperature below 60° degrees for four weeks, preferably in dim light. When root growth is sufficient, top growth will begin, and then they should have all the light possible. Best flowers will result when the temperature never exceeds 70° degrees. Keep them away from radiators and steam pipes, and out of overheated living rooms.

Instead of gravel, bowls may be filled with bulb fibre or potting soil. Containers should be deep enough to allow two inches of gravel, fibre or soil below them. Set the bulbs close together but do not let them touch, and only the necks should emerge from the soil.

Yellow Paper Whites (soliel d'or) and Narcissus Early Perfection can also be grown by these methods, but they take longer to make flowers.

Jumbo Hyacinth Bulbs Will Flower in Hyacinth Glasses Filled With Water.

The best time to start all these is Dec. 1, for mid-January flowers.

Large bulbs of hyacinths can be grown in water in special glasses, and both bulbs and glasses are available this year for the first time since the war began. The glasses support the bulbs just above the water, into which their roots drop. It takes 10 to 12 weeks for the roots to develop, in a dark place, in cool temperature.

When roots fill the glass and top growth begins, accustom the plant gradually to light, and grow slowly in a temperature below 65° degrees. The water should not be changed, but merely replenished.

When top growth begins, these bulbs must have all the light you can give them. They should be kept near windows, in a sun parlor or room where ventilation can be given and temperatures kept down. By

After 1500 Years Fragrant Peonies Losing Popularity

By CECIL SOLLY

It was not until early in the 18th century that the fragrant type peony family was introduced into Europe from China, although it was known to be a favorite there at least 1,500 years ago.

Peony suffruticosa, the so-called "tree peony," is a hardy, bushy deciduous shrub. It seldom grows to more than five or six feet and there seems no valid reason why it should have been maintained by the profession.

The shrub has a most attractive habit of growth, all season long, commencing with its rose-green leaves in early spring. The leaves unfold like the fronds of a fern. In less than a week, the bud produces an exotic leafage more than a foot long.

FROM 30 TO 40 FLOWERS

The flowers generally come about 10-15 days ahead of the herbaceous peonies. A well-established shrub will usually bear from 30-40 flowers. All varieties are very fragrant. They grow to a fine size, often reaching 10 feet. Oriental peonies, since they frequently measure a foot or more in height, are most popular. These are a few singles and semi-doubles grown by specialists. These are generally called Japanese types and have a centre cushion of golden anthers surrounded by broad petals with edges like crinkled paper.

In choice of color, the tree peony has all those found in the herbaceous peony tribe, plus a great variety of the much brighter shades such as salmon, cerise, yellow and wisteria blue, coral, purple-maroon and rich burgundy. Several of the large nurseries in this district used to carry quite a large variety of colors and types. Probably due to the lack of knowledge among gardeners as to how to grow this easy shrub, there has not been much demand for tree peonies.

One well-known nurseryman recently told me he had such little call for this lovely shrub that he had practically given up its propagation. After all, if we, the public, don't buy these shrubs, we cannot blame nurserymen for classing it as an unprofitable item and discontinuing its sale.

Shrubs for which there is little call generally cost more than the popular sorts. When people have realized what an attractive and easy-to-grow shrub it is, the tree peony will class among those with a popular price.

There may be another reason that tree peonies are not too well favored, and it certainly is not the fault of the shrub. The disease Botrytis, which often infests the herbaceous peonies, is liable to infect this member of the family too. Botrytis disease lives and is carried in fresh manure. This is the reason that those who know gardening best always advise that no manure be used around any type of peony.

Sometimes, during a mild fall, a few branches will not become properly ripened to stand the winter. Then, if the January weather is severe, some die-back may result. No pruning, except removal of an occasional dead shoot, is ever necessary, but one may cut the flowers without harming the bush in any way.

Tree peonies are ideal subjects for the north or east side of the house, or in front of any evergreens which will form a screen for them from the afternoon sun.

POWER FOR ARROW LAKE UNLEASHES INDUSTRY

By JOHN SHAW

Development by the British Columbia Power Commission of an initial $3,000,000 hydro project on the Lower Arrow River, which has been hailed as a boon to the farmer and to commerce generally in the wide district which it serves.

But this power development takes on an added significance in the light of information from forest research sources, because it can provide the essential electricity for the manufacture of pulp, plywood and mill products. For that matter, power is there to effect wood distillation of turpentine and alcohol, so that not only the forest resources are protected.

Whitman's power lines at the present time climb over the Monashee Mountains to the westward. Consideration of transmission at high voltage to the north and south in the Upper and Lower Arrow Lakes country proper, is limited. It is imperative that an economic transmission level should be governed before such a project is embarked upon by the power commission.

For power lines, adequate distribution, at stepped down voltages, is the only practical support for a heavy industrial plant. Either that, or the demand of some specific industry which will purchase power in sufficient quantity to warrant transmission investment.

14,000 DEMANDING POWER

The problem at Whitman is no different from that at most other hydro-electric developments. First of all, there has to be a market for power before the project can take shape. The powerhouse and two and a half miles of tunnel construction, the dam and intake, the clearing and the housing accommodation at Whitman, cost approximately $5,000,000. The commission would not have contemplated this outlay except for the fact that in the Vernon area, and in the Kamloops area, and the scattered centres about these key points, there were 14,000 customers demanding more and more power. Moreover, there was reason to believe that industrial development would be stimulated by the laying on of adequate power at economical rates. The commission went ahead on this theory.

Having built a power plant, it is necessary to deliver the product to the consuming centres. The Kamloops transmission line across the Monashee highlands, to the sub-station at Vernon, cost in excess of $1,000,000. Its power is fed into the Kamloops system which was built to convey Shuswap power to distribution before Whitman was completed. The demand for power justified the cash outlay. But to think of building a transmission line north and south along the Arrow Lakes at a cost of more than $1,000,000 would be fatuous, unless there is the point . . . an adequate power demand is indicated.

It is argued that the proximity of reasonably-priced power is a stimulant to establishment of industry. So does the ice cream wagon stimulate the children's interest. But the children have to be there, or thereabouts, before the ice cream vendor ventures into the area. Power commissions have no venture capital. Their dollars are hard to come by. They have to be borrowed on 40-year bonds; and they have to be repaid with interest.

But if there were a real prospect of big industries along the Arrow Lakes, the commission operating Whitman would undoubtedly be ready to serve them. There has simply to be a meeting place along

Vast Timber Wealth Within Reach

Development of Whatchan Lake as a source of power in B.C.'s timber-rich interior may have opened the way for a vast, new integrated industry. Few are aware of the resources of this little-known frontier.

The way, industry has to say, "If you are prepared to sell me power, I'll establish." If you will guarantee to do business, I will bring you the energy."

CHANCE FOR BIG INDUSTRY

There is a chance for this big industry along the Arrow Lakes. On Upper Arrow Lake, there are more than 200,000 acres of merchantable timber. This is a sizeable forest. On the map, this area is designated as Brangage Basin No. 13. Its northwest corner is only about 15 miles from Craigellachie, northernmost delivery point of B.C. Power Commission energy from Whatchan, through Vernon. The southern fringe of this great timber stand is about the same distance from Whatchan power plant. Delivery of energy to any point within this forest area is no real problem for the power producer.

What is there in this area in the way of timber? For one thing, there are 241,650,000 board feet of Douglas fir, a wood most suitable for saw logs and mill supply; there are 574,270,000 board feet of western red cedar, biggest stand in the whole of the Nelson and Kamloops Forest Districts; there are 350,080,000 feet of western hemlock, greatest volume of its kind in Nelson-Kamloops district; and there is very heavy as much spruce.

In addition there is silver fir, 183,550,000 feet, white pine, 180,780,000 feet and larch in quantity. All of this is mature timber.

INTEGRATED INDUSTRY

Represented here are the crops to feed practically every branch of the forest industry. Integrated industry is the pattern today, followed by the Scandinavian countries for some years and being widely adopted by such enterprises as H. R. MacMillan, B.C. Forest Products, Alaska Pulp and Bledel interests in this province. In the Upper Arrow Lake country there is timber for saw logs, for pulp and for plywood; for shingles, turpentine and wood alcohol are valuable by-products.

For five years or more Arrow Lakes has been studying the Arrow Lakes country. One big operating company has gone so far as to build a model pulp plant in its research work out a practical formula for utilizing these forest resources. Up to now, the power and transportation

NATURE TALKS

Fresh-Water Plants On Salty Shores

To those whose lives have been spent near the sea the wonders of the deep are too often taken for granted or simply ignored. But to those who make their living in an urban environment there is a generally a feeling of wonder and astonishment. Some years ago I met a young teacher from the prairie country where all his life had been spent. His intense interest in the life of the waters washing our shores was a great pleasure to see.

ANIMAL LIFE SPECIMENS

I recall how he collected numbers of specimens of the animal life of the shore waters, crabs, jelly-fish, sea-urchins, shell-inhabiting animals, and how he puzzled over the problem of getting them to his quarters. Students of botany from the Great Plains have seen by our shores filled with wonderment at our seaweeds and at the relatives of their home water plants that make their home in the salty shore waters.

The most conspicuous of the latter is that commonly known as eelgrass and found in shallow water just below the low-tide mark, and extending out to a depth of six to ten feet of water. The bright green leaves are decidedly grasslike, narrow, and often six feet or more long. Very interesting are the flowers, which, unlike our familiar land ones, consist of the reproductive parts, pistils and stamens, arranged in alternate order within a transparent case at the base of a leaf. Needless to say, these flowers are not conspicuously displayed for pollination as in the case of most land plants. The pollen floats in the water, the

Some years ago I had an inquiry from the University of California for specimens of eelgrass, and the recipient was greatly surprised to find the plant in flower, as the season was mid-winter. This apparent anomaly was due, no doubt, to the comparatively warm waters of our coast. We have no doubt that our pasture tables compiled by my friend Mr. J. E. Cornwall when stationed at William Head.

Wrote Way To Fame After 60

By N. DE BERTHIAUD LUGRIN
(Author of "Fisher Women of Vancouver Island")

It was shortly after the First Great War that Mrs. Adams Beck came to Victoria. She and her husband stopped at the Empress Hotel for a time and they both dropped in occasionally to see me at my office in the Belmont Block. He was years older than she, a stoutish, white-haired rubicund Englishman, rather a delightful sort of person to meet, with a ready smile and sense of humor. He did not remain in Victoria long. He went home to England. She fell in love with Victoria at once and decided to live here.

She was a very small woman, not at all pretty, but she had an indefinable charm that impressed one at once. A sort of fascination that was not admiring exactly, but rather an intense curiosity to know her better and the inner workings of her mind. She had an abnormal intelligence and an amazing memory.

She loved jewels. Used to load her small, blue-veined hands with heavy rings and wear rather bizarre but beautiful necklaces and brooches. She scorned cosmetics and normally had little color, but her cheeks would flush as she talked, and her old, grey eyes would sparkle. Her smile was enigmatic. Perhaps she smiled at what the rest of us were smiling, perhaps because we found anything to smile about.

When I knew her well, if anybody really did, she asked me to do a short biographical sketch of herself for publication in the United States. I did so, calling it "The Lady With the Mask." This title was because of a picture of herself, painted by a well-known artist. It was almost life size, and hung on the wall in her drawing-room. It showed her sitting at a very good piano, and holding a book in her hand, and looking a real portrait except that it was quite smiling, and the eyes tragic. Perhaps it was a sort of key to her character.

She soon made a very large host of friends, for she was kindness and generosity themselves. Her interest and patience with younger writers were remarkable when one realized how hard and steadily she worked and how little short of perfection much of that work was. I have known her to spend a whole evening over a friend's manuscript of a short story, criticizing and giving advice. She was frankly delighted if the writer met with success.

WORKING ROUTINE

Her first novel was written after she came here. Previously she had published many articles, mostly on Oriental philosophy. In her writing she followed a strict routine, rarely deviating from it. Rising at 7, she ate a light breakfast and then went for a walk with her beloved Aberdeen terrier, an unfriendly little beast he was, too, hardly tolerating anyone but his mistress. Returning to work about 9, she would write until 1.30, when she had her frugal luncheon, which I sometimes shared with her. She was a vegetarian and

Jacoby Gives Rules For Samba

This is first of a series of three special articles on Samba written by Oswald Jacoby for "Samba" players who have requested information on the game.

I have received so many questions on Samba in the last few weeks that I have decided to answer them all by describing the game once more in a couple of columns. If you already know all about the game, bear with me for the sake of the newcomers. Samba is three-pack Canasta. Sandstone Creek, this side of Jordan River. The commoner is Torrey's. They occur near the mouth of the creek. Both have narrow leaves, much narrower than those of the common eelgrass. The flowers of the surf-grass are separate, staminate and pistillate, each in distinct spikes. They flower in July and August.

Some years ago I had an inquiry from the University of California for specimens of eelgrass, and the recipient was greatly surprised to find the plant in flower, as the season was mid-winter. This apparent anomaly was due, no doubt, to the comparatively warm waters of our coast. We have no doubt that our pasture tables compiled by my friend Mr. J. E. Cornwall when stationed at William Head.

When you draw from the stock pile, you take two cards instead of one only. However, you discard only one card, as in regular Canasta. Hence you keep increasing your hand by one card whenever you draw from the stock pile. This is a rule that dozens of readers ask me about. You're not

Finds College Men Better Dates

Take it from Peggy Dow, "Movie stars are fun to date, but college men are more human."

The blonde and glamorous Peggy should know. She dates them both. "Men in the movies, by their very nature, have to think and talk a lot about themselves," she stately actress said on the set of Samuel Goldwyn's "I Want You," in which she co-stars with Dana Andrews, Dorothy McGuire and Farley Granger.

"Naturally, that carries over into their dates, and just as naturally, it can get pretty tiresome. "The college men I date are interested in a world of subjects besides themselves."

"Because they don't have to be on, as we say, one who more or less is acting all the time, they can afford to be natural, relaxed and human. A lot of the kids I see on campus parties are studying to be engineers, scientists, farmers and business men."

Actors are actors, first and last. If they're not talking about their own performances, they are discussing pretty boring. "It can get pretty boring or someone else." Mr. Dow has been linked romantically at various times with Walter Houser, a Tulsa, Okla., oil man and with Bob Leebody, a former basketball player at the University of California at Los Angeles.

so was I. She gave bounteous and delicious teas to her friends in the afternoons when she received, but ate nothing herself. Her own dinners at night were sketchy, but her dinner parties were feasts.

She made the first drafts of her stories in fat scribbles, in pencil, in her large handwriting. They were typed by her secretary. She did all of her writing in the mornings, and what a tremendous lot she could accomplish by close concentration may be gathered from the fact that she wrote her second novel for the Cosmopolitan in eight weeks.

UNDER THREE NAMES

She wrote under three names. I liked the stories with an Oriental background best. I think she did too. She was a deep student of Oriental religions and philosophies, especially Buddhism, to which she was a strong adherent. She had traveled extensively in the Orient and was especially impressed by the Japanese people, "their high order of civility, their lofty ideals." In fact, she was an impassioned devotee of all Orientals and their philosophy of life. To disagree with her was to start a long argument on her part. She felt that the usual Occidental attitude toward them was entirely wrong, and though she did not frankly advocate an admixture of races, one knew that the idea was in no sense repugnant to her.

Her long sojourn in the Orient had imbued her, one felt, with something of Oriental qualities, in particular that caution in mental approach, and an apparent humility of mind. It was this latter characteristic which gave to all of her countless addresses, public and private, a sort of undertone that was very touching.

MANY HONORS

Though honors came to her thick and fast, she placed herself on the lowest rung of the ladder of fame. Yet she wrote and spoke with the authority acquired by endless study and research, and enlivened by her remarkable memory. She could switch from one era to another, one religion to another, one dynasty to another, and she loved Japan. Of her sojourn there I know very little. It was not long. She died there very suddenly. She had become an acknowledged Buddhist and was cremated there, her ashes scattered in a forest above Koto. For a long time the Japanese made a yearly pilgrimage there. They may do so yet.

Among her many journeys she traveled to Tibet. Had she lived a little longer she would probably have produced some wonderfully interesting and mystical stories. But I do not know of anything she published after she went from here.

First prize went to Dave Wilkie, Box 1665, R.R. No. 3, when he captured Their Royal Highnesses for Victoria Times Royal Visit Photo Contest. The amateurs were hampered by murky weather, but many fine pictures were entered. Wilkie got his delightfully informal snap just as the Princess and the Duke of Edinburgh set out from the Legislative Buildings. (Other winners on Page 11.)

SNOW STORM CLAIMS
14 ONTARIO LIVESTraffic Accidents, Heart Attacks
Attributed To First Winter Fall

TORONTO, Nov. 3 (CP)—Fourteen persons died in traffic accidents and from heart attacks attributed to the weather as the first general snowfall of the season Friday night turned Ontario highways into skating rinks and cut visibility.

There were two triple-death automobile accidents.

John M. McDonald, 37, of Avondale, N.S.; Loretta Enright, 24, of Toronto, and Hugh McDonald, 33, of Westhill, Ont., were fatally injured in a two-car collision near Orillia.

Three residents of Royal Oak, Mich., were killed in a collision between two cars near Kingsville, Ont.

Glen Sedore, eight, of Odessa, was killed when he was crushed against a bridge railing by a skidding transport truck.

Three Toronto men died of heart attacks during the storm.

Egypt Plans
Appeal To U.N.

CAIRO, Nov. 3 (Reuters).—Foreign Minister Salaf El Din Pasha flew to Paris today with documents on British "aggression" in the Suez Canal zone since Egypt cancelled the Anglo-Egyptian treaty.

He will lead Egypt's delegation to the United Nations General Assembly, which opens Tuesday. Salaf El Din said Friday Egypt had not "so far" decided to bring the Anglo-Egyptian dispute before the General Assembly.

But a foreign-ministry spokesman said the ministry will meet Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, in Paris to explain Egypt's attitude.

In the Suez Canal zone, British troops were on guard against possible rioting after a quiet Moslem Sabbath Friday.

Portsmouth
Scores Big Soccer Upset

LONDON, Nov. 3 (Reuters). Portsmouth, league winners in 1949, pulled off the biggest British soccer upset of the day by knocking Bolton Wanderers off their perch at the top of the English League Division I with a 3-0 win at Bolton.

With Portsmouth two up at half-time, Bolton's star international forward Nat Lofthouse tried hard to score but time and again wily Geoff Buttle, pushed his piledrivers out of Portsmouth's net.

London's arsenal gunners now head the Division I table after a spectacular 3-0 victory over Middlesbrough. Arsenal swept straight down the field from the start, scoring in the first 30 seconds and clinching the game with another two in the second half.

Tottenham Hotspur, last year's league winners, lost favorites again this year, scored a 4-2 home victory over Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Selects Three
More Ministers

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill today named three new ministers to handle the legal functions of his Conservative government.

Lionel Frederick Heald, 54-year-old lawyer, becomes attorney-general at £10,000 a year. A Conservative member of the House of Commons since 1950, Heald is an expert on real estate and tax law.

Maj. Reginald Manningham-Buller, 46, was named solicitor-general. He is chairman of the Conservative party's legal committee and a member of Parliament. The solicitor-general's post pays £7,000 a year.

Churchill chose William Rankine Milligan, 52, to be solicitor-general for Scotland. Milligan, an Edinburgh lawyer, is not a member of parliament.

Northwest's
Lumbermen
Parley HereHundreds To Talk
Industry Problems

By plane and ship, the vanguard of 1,500 Canadian and U.S. western logging operators flocked into Victoria today to attend the 42nd three-day session of the Pacific Logging Congress opening Monday.

From 84-year-old P. B. Anderson, of Vancouver, "dean of loggers" in this area, down to youngsters of the "game," the rugged contingent—of early arrivals served notice they will mix business with pleasure in hearty fashion.

They came from the fir forests up-Island and the B.C. mainland, from the great fir and pine stands of the U.S. northwest, and from the tall timber of Idaho, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, and California.

By the time the first committee session gets under way at 9 Monday morning at the Empress Hotel, 1,500 operators and others in allied industries are expected to be registered.

Feature of the business sessions will be a discussion on "Determination of Logging Costs From the Managerial Viewpoint," to be held Monday afternoon at the Sirocco Club. Other sessions at the Sirocco will centre about yarding and loading, falling and bucking, truck roads and hauling, safety, and industry's relation to U.S. government during national emergency. These will be conducted Tuesday and Wednesday.

Psychiatrist's
Report Sought
In Acid Case

A psychiatrist's report on 31-year-old Edward Smith in last week-end's "acid-throwing" hoax in Saanich will be read before the naval veteran is sentenced on a public mischief charge next week.

Smith, released from hospital Friday, appeared before Magistrate Henry C. Hall in police court today, his face badly scarred, and pleaded guilty to the charge.

He was remanded to next Thursday for sentence. Meanwhile a psychiatrist will examine Smith at the request of the magistrate.

In addition, a probation officer's report will be prepared for submission to the court.

Smith pleaded guilty to the public mischief charge after confessing to Saanich police. Sgt. Jack Hamilton said Smith was acquitted in the face with acid from a water pistol by one of three youths who accosted him on Maplewood Avenue last Saturday night were false.

He had reported to police three youths asked him for a Halloween "hand-out" and when he told them they were "rushing things" had the acid splashed in his face.

Police have not divulged if, in the confession, Smith gave any reason why he perpetrated the hoax.

In the confession Smith said he dabbed the caustic soda and lye on his face with a piece of cloth.

U.N. INTRODUCE
NEW TRUCE PLANReds Cool To Proposal That Would Place Kaesong In Demilitarized Zone

MUNSAN, Korea, Nov. 3 (AP)—United Nations' truce negotiators, in a surprise move, proposed to the Communists today that disputed Kaesong be placed in a demilitarized zone. Decision on the Red-held city was the final main issue blocking agreement on a Korean armistice cease-fire line.

Red negotiators at Panmunjom apparently were cool toward the offer, but a U.N. spokesman said the Communists "had not categorically turned down the proposal."

He said the Communists repeated the reasons why they feel Kaesong should remain in their control.

U.N. Allies want Kaesong, about two miles south of the 38th Parallel, to protect the northern approaches of Seoul.

There were no details available on the U.N. plan but it could mean one of three things:

1. Set up a separate demilitarized (neutral) zone around Kaesong under joint control.

2. Enlarge the already proposed U.N. buffer zone to include Kaesong.

3. Pull the proposed U.N. buffer zone back so that it runs through Kaesong.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckolls said the suggestion was merely "an oral statement of principle" by Brig. Gen. Henry I. Hodges, head of the U.N. sub-committee.

The U.N. offer came in the 10th meeting of the sub-committees. They will meet again Sunday at 11 a.m.

The sub-committees are in tentative agreement of a U.N.-proposed 2½-mile-wide buffer zone on the eastern and central battle fronts. It is almost entirely in North Korea and follows the present battle line.

Even if the issue of a cease-fire line is settled, armistice negotiators must agree on three other tough questions before the shooting in the 37-month-old Korean war will stop.

These are how the truce will be supervised, how to exchange prisoners, and what recommendations will be made by the armistice negotiators to their governments.

"No one knows at just what point one slips over the line in to a mentally impaired condition," Dr. Houston explained.

"But certainly it is reasonable to conclude that Louis has now absorbed enough blows on the head so that he could be considered on the threshold of danger."

"One solid blow, even by a rank amateur, could conceivably punch him overboard."

Dr. Houston, who has examined thousands of boxers in his medical career, last examined Louis before he fought Cesar Brion of Argentina in the Chicago stadium Nov. 29, 1950.

The physician, explaining why he believes the 37-year-old Louis has slowed up so alarmingly and now is unable to skillfully defend himself, said:

"It could be the accumulation of damage or age. Some people age prematurely. Louis is like a drowning man. He may come up twice before he dunks."

Dispatch Hints Canucks
In Furious Korea Action

Canadian troops may be in a major action in Korea. The following dispatch was filed today by veteran Canadian Press correspondent Bill Boss, who is with the Canadian forces in the West-Central Sector. Censorship normally prevents a correspondent naming units by nationality.

By BILL BOSS
With Canadian Forces in Korea

WEST-CENTRAL SECTOR, Korea, Nov. 3 (CP)—Waves of Communist infantry today charged United Nations ridge-top positions in this sector.

They surrounded a U.N. outpost position but the men fought their way back to the main defense lines.

The attack was spotted about 9:15 last night when sentries heard explosions and groaning in minefields protecting the U.N. lines.

The Reds went through their bag of tricks, including bugle calls and colored-flare signals to direct their forces.

They used three methods to cut a path through the minefield. With machetes they chopped barbed wire from its steel-peg moorings. With Bangalore torpedoes, long pipes with an explosive at the end for detonation in the field, they blew up buried mines. They used the bodies of their own dying as paving stones.

The Red attack was supported by at least eight medium machine-guns, anti-aircraft artillery firing at point-blank range, two self-propelled guns and batteries of heavy and medium mortars.

It was of battalion strength and the enemy came in four times during the night.

The U.N. outpost platoon, while surrounded, asked artillery fire on its own position but this was refused. At 4 a.m. it fought its way out.

When it was about 100 yards back the platoon leader paused to direct a concentration of 10 rounds per gun from the entire divisional artillery on to the ground just vacated.

Besides allowing further withdrawal, it inflicted heavy casualties on the Communists. The colonel commanding U.N. troops said the casualty ratio in the U.N. troops' favor was probably 20 to 1.

CAPTURE PRISONERS

The U.N. troops also captured three prisoners, two of them wounded.

At one time the platoon leader's flare pistol was shot out of his hand and his revolver jammed when he fired it at point-blank range. Picking up a burp gun from a dying Chinese he continued the battle, using the enemy weapon until the end of the engagement.

Another soldier, completing his first day with the company involved, calmly stripped two jammed Bren guns in the heat of the action and put them back in service.
